Survey Ordered On Fodder Crop

National Board Named to Handle Emergency in Seared West.

Conservation of the Nation's meat supplies became the Administration's major consideration yesterday as it widened the scope of its drought relief plans.

On the heels of a drought conference with President Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace appointed a national live stock feed committee to draw a net of protection around millions of starving cattle.

No meat shortage threatens, it was emphasized, but one will unless vast supplies of fodder are provided for animals in the blackened farm belt.

Necessity for conserving the live stock through subsistence feeding "transcends human needs" in the sun-baked agricultural area, Mr. Wallace declared. He was not prepared to outline the committee's plans, but its paramount objective will be relieving the feed emergency.

Survey Fodder Resources.

To this end the committee is expected to inquire into all fodder resources in this country and Canada. Ascertain means of quick transportation, make surveys looking to pasturage on the public domain, and examine costs.

Its data will be turned over to the Agricultural Department, the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and other agencies charged with relieving one of the greatest economic calamities ever to seize the Nation.

Meantime, the White House, Mr. Wallace and other Administration officials reiterated that no food shortage was imminent. Surpluses from areas outside the drought region will be more than enough to supply all demands far into next summer, they said. They added that hoarding of food was unnecessary and that profiteers attempting to increase their golden hoard at the expense of drought victims would feel the Government lash.

The Department of Labor meantime revealed that prices of standard foods were increasing steadily, however, and that ultimate effects of the drought would be felt in every home in the land.

It reported prices at the highest level of the year and 15.5 per cent

Church Rebels At Hitler Oath

German Evangelical Group in Berlin Defies Plan of Nazification.

Berlin, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—The German Evangelical Church crisis flared into open revolt today against Nazification under the dictatorial administration of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, acting as Reichsfuehrer Hitler's aid in the move to unify the Protestant sects.

Leaders in the Evangelical Church opposition in Berlin, under chairmanship of the Rev. Johannes Koch, decided to refuse to take the new oath of office drawn up by Bishop Mueller's national church synod on August 9. The synod approved the oath for all Evangelical Church pastors, but the opposition today rejected it.

The oath pledged the ministers and all church employes "to be faithful and obedient to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and render the German nation every service and sacrifice befitting Evangelical German citizens."

The Evangelical Bishops Meiser and Wurm, of Bavaria and Wuertemberg, declared they would not exact the oath from ministers under their jurisdictions.

The opposition bloc spokesman declared that only the state, not the church, was entitled to demand an oath supporting political authorities.

Supreme Court Judge Flor, a member of the church opposition council, in a legal opinion declared unconstitutional the decisions of the National Synod last week, making Dr. Mueller dictator. The opinion will be submitted to the Reich government.

Mellon Denies Buying $1,500,000 Painting

Pittsburgh, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The office of Andrew W. Mellon today denied that the former Secretary of the Treasury has purchased the picture "The Alba Madonna," by Raphael, for which Paris dispatches asserted he had paid the Soviet government $1,500,000.

Mellon cabled his son, Paul Mellon, that he had not purchased the picture, a representative said.

Canada Kidnapers Believed Cornered

Police Net Drawn Around Farmhouse in Western Ontario, Reported Hideout of Rich Brewer's Abductors; Brother on Secret Trip.

London, Ontario, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Feverish police activity converging on a point north and west of this city, home of the kidnaped John S. Labatt, aroused the belief here late tonight that important developments were pending in the search for the wealthy brewer.

Two motorcycle police went through St. John's, a few miles north of London, shortly after 11 o'clock. They were traveling at a terrific pace, townsmen said.

An employe of the Labatt Brewing Co. passed through London about the same time in an armored car. He was believed to be a special envoy of the Labatt family. He stopped for a short time and continued west.

A spokesman for the family said they were completely in the dark as to recent developments.

Toronto, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—A Toronto police officer said tonight John S. Labatt, kidnaped London, Ont., brewery official, was believed to be held by his abductors at a farmhouse in western Ontario.

Although he did not reveal the source of his information, the officer said the Labatt family had made two contacts with the kidnapers through Hugh Labatt, a brother, while he was in Toronto.

The whole investigation took a new turn late today when it was learned Hugh Labatt had been absent from the hotel room here where he had been conducting telephone negotiations, presumably with the kidnapers, on a secret mission since early this morning.

Further revelations disclosed the discovery of witnesses to the kidnaping of the wealthy 50-year-old brewer, near Sarnia, the family's summer home.

The Toronto officer said the farmhouse where the kidnaped victim was believed held was rented especially for the purpose by a group of gangsters, who took it over some time ago.

Indicating that the negotiations with the Labatt family had not been completed, the officer said the family was demanding concrete evidence from the kidnapers that they held John Labatt alive.

He said no action would be taken until the evidence is forthcoming.

The investigation near Sarnia disclosed several farmers and residents who said they had identified the automobile of John Labatt on the morning of the kidnaping.

One, Jack Burnley who lives on a side-road east of Camlachie, said he saw two black automobiles

Kidnap Note Asks Ransom Of Evangelist

Wife of North Carolina Pastor Tells Demand for $25,000.

Goldsboro, N. C., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The wife of the Rev. R. H. Askew, an evangelist who has been missing from his home here for two days, disclosed today she had received a note telling her to "get $25,000" if she hoped to see him alive again.

The 28-year-old evangelist, who has been preaching what he terms the "four-square gospel" in a tent here for several months, failed to return from a trip to Smithfield, 25 miles west of here Tuesday.

His wife, about 50 years old, turned over to Sheriff Paul Garrison this morning a note she received through the mails Wednesday.

Typed on cheap paper and inclosed in a plain envelope it said: "Get $25,000 at once or you will never see your husband live again. Instructions will follow."

The letter bore no signature. It was postmarked at Goldsboro at 8:30 p. m., August 14, that is about the hour that letters taken from city boxes here in the last collection of the evening are postmarked.

The Askews have little wealth. The wife owns some property of small value in the western part of the State.

Sheriff Garrison informed the Department of Justice of Mr. Askew's absence and the note, but said that so far as he knew no Federal agents had been sent here.

He said he believed any one familiar with Mrs. Askew's means could not expect her to raise $25,000.

Some of the evangelist's followers said they believed enemies had detained him.

The evangelist, on leaving here between 4:30 and 5 p. m. Tuesday, said he intended to go to Smithfield to obtain brick, with which to build a tabernacle here.

Sheriff Garrison said he learned the minister was seen driving toward Smithfield about 7 p. m. in a black coupe. No trace of the car has been found.

Askew attended Duke University, Durham, for a time last year and then came here as pastor of the Free Will Baptist Church. His sermons drew criticism from some members of the congregation, who said he was preaching doctrines not in accord with the church's beliefs.

Church officials told him he must conform to the church's accepted doctrines, or give up his pastorate. He left the church and began evangelistic services in a tent. A faction of the Free Will congregation left the church to join his independent meetings, and he drew some followers from the Holiness Church here.

Lea Resigns NRA; Couch Leaves RFC

Two Leaders in Recovery Drive Return to Business.

Resignation of Col. Robert W. Lea, assistant NRA administrator for industry, to take what Gen. Hugh S. Johnson described as "a damned good job," was announced yesterday.

Col. Lea will leave Tuesday to become a consultant for a group of Pacific Coast manufacturing and banking interests, including the Hammond Lumber Company of San Francisco.

Officials said Col. Lea was returning to the same type of work in which he formerly engaged. Prior to joining NRA he traveled extensively through Europe and South America appraising properties for development and reorganizing companies.

A personal friend of Gen. Johnson for many years, Col. Lea was one of the "Four Horsemen" who aided in organizing the recovery unit more than a year ago. The others, since resigned, included Dudley Cates, A. D. Whiteside and K. M. Simpson.

Col. Lea negotiated many outstanding codes, including those for the construction, cotton garment, cement and furniture industries. He also set up NRA organizations in Puerto Rico, Hawaii, Alaska and other insular possessions. His other duties involved a study and report on the motion-picture industry and mediation of labor disputes.

He originally went to NRA with the understanding that he would be permitted to withdraw in three months, but was persuaded to stay

"Nation on Upgrade," Couch Tells President

President Roosevelt announced last night that he has accepted the resignation of Harvey C. Couch as a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as of September 1.

In a letter to the President, Couch said that he feels the Nation definitely has "turned the tide," through the efforts of emergency measures sponsored by the Administration, and is well on the road to recovery.

For this reason, Couch said, he felt it necessary that he ask to be relieved to return to leadership of his own public utility interests in Arkansas and other Southwestern States.

Mother Brings Roosevelt 'Bargain' Suit From Europe

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Mrs. James Roosevelt, 78-year-old mother of the President, came back from a two-month holiday in Europe today, bringing "a new suit for Franklin."

She seemed pleased over the bargain she picked up in Scotland—4 yards of the famous Aberdeenshire tweed.

"I want Franklin," she said, "to have it made up into a suit. Of course it will be rather heavy for wear in Washington, but he can use it when he is in New York. It's such splendid tweed and it was a great bargain. It cost me only £3."

Pleased, too, was Mrs. Roosevelt when reporters aboard the Ile de France told her that the foreign press had saluted her as "the greatest hit in Paris since Lindbergh" and "the most effective good-will ambassador America ever sent to Great Britain."

"Oh, my!" said Mrs. Roosevelt. "Did the papers say that? It takes the newspapers to say nice things!"

She was asked to tell about her visit with King George and Queen Mary.

"Oh," she said, "we didn't talk about anything special. The King, of course, asked about Franklin. My son met him years ago. But it was nice at the palace because we three were alone—much nicer than if I'd had to go with a crowd."

A photographer who accompanied President Roosevelt on his Pacific cruise mentioned that fact to her. She immediately wanted to know how her two grandsons, Franklin, jr., and John, had "behaved."

"I've got to go straight to Hyde Park," she said, "and get the house ready for Franklin."

Five Convicts Caught After Virginia Dash

Bloodhounds Run Down Final Fugitive in Night Chase.

Guard Is Disarmed and Prison Matron Used as Shield.

Richmond, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Police and prison guards tonight captured Wellford Hayden, colored lifetermer, the last of five convicts who fled from the Virginia State Penitentiary here this morning. The others were retaken within three hours.

The hunt for Hayden continued until after dark despite a slashing rain which hampered bloodhounds in their attempts to follow his scent, but he was finally run down.

Hayden was brought directly to Richmond and returned to the penitentiary. The finding of Hayden ended a cleverly planned and daringly executed prison break which earned only three hours' freedom for four of the convicts.

Trapped in a wood 30 miles from the penitentiary after abandoning their stolen automobile when police pursuit became too hot, the fugitives made no resistance when State police and penitentiary guards closed in upon them.

No Attempt to Use Gun.

Billy Lynn, one of the convicts, who was serving a 45-year term for the robbery of a bank at Ewing, Va., had in his possession the pistol taken from the penitentiary guard, but made no attempt to use it.

Taken with Lynn were Edward Veal, 21, Lynn's companion in the Ewing Bank robbery, who also was sentenced to 45 years for the crime; Claiborne Layne, a colored man, serving a life term, and Paul Austin, also colored, serving 37 years for burglary.

Superintendent Rice M. Youell said that as soon as he returns to Richmond he will begin an investigation of the delivery.

Forty-five minutes after the five fled from the penitentiary, they were shot at as they passed the State prison farm, 26 miles away.

Reallizng police knew their route and were guarding all roads, the fugitives abandoned their automobile and fled into the woods. Some two hours later the handcuffed prisoners were in a penitentiary truck on their return to Richmond.

Break Carefully Planned.

Officials were convinced the break was carefully planned by the prisoners who took the easiest way out—through the laundry room of the women's quarters and over a low wall and wire fence.

J. W. Coffey, a guard, was in the laundry room at the time. One man came in with a trash can he was accustomed to empty. Quietly his arm circled Coffey's neck and the four other prisoners rushed in to help overpower the guard.

Women screamed while the prisoners, all described as of the "toughest type," took Coffey's pistol and keys. Outside the door they found Mrs. Virginia Spencer, a matron.

Carrying her with them as a shield, the prisoners scurried across the yard and over the wall. In an alley nearby the fugitives stopped a blue coupe driven by Robin Pollard, took the car and started their dash through the city.

Japanese Press Threatens Russia

Hints of Military Action in Manchurian Crisis.

Tokyo, Aug. 17 (Friday) (A.P.).—The Japanese press today was publishing threats of military action against the Soviet government as the result of another dangerous situation in north Manchuria.

With negotiations over disposition of the Chinese Eastern Railroad deadlocked again after failure of the Russians to consider a final Japanese offer, Japanese-Soviet relations have encountered another blustery crisis.

There have been several like it since Japan in 1931 seized Manchuria and began attempts to relieve Russia of her Manchurian holdings and end Russian influence in the region.

Tumor Is Unchanged On Dionne Baby's Leg

Callander, Ontario, Aug. 16 (A.P.). Attendants of the 80-day-old Dionne quintuplets today watched closely for some change in the tumor on Marie's leg, but no difference was noted in the outward appearance.

Dr. Howard Kelly, of Johns Hopkins Hospital University, Baltimore, visited the five little sisters August 6 and brought radium with him. The radium was applied for 44 minutes and it was hoped this would be the only treatment necessary.

N. Y. Banker Kills Self.

New York, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Vernon P. Baker, 45, second vice president of the Chase National Bank, committed suicide today by shooting himself in his room at a midtown hotel. The body was discovered by a maid.

Directs Colonies

DR. ERNEST H. GRUENING.

Dr. Gruening New Director For Colonies

Liberal Editor Appointed to Recently-Created Interior Post.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, liberal editor, anti-imperialist and a recognized authority on Latin-American matters, yesterday was named director of the newly created Division of Territories and Island Possessions in the Interior Department.

In effect, he becomes the first colonial administrator of the United States since the newly created agency over which he will have charge is similar to the colonial ministries long establisned in many foreign countries. The appointment was made by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Some weeks ago this new division was established by Presidential Executive order, after Mr. Roosevelt transferred to the Interior Department from the War Department jurisdiction over Puerto Rico. Jurisdiction over the Virgin Islands, Hawaii and Alaska previously had been lodged in the Interior Department, but under different officials.

Since steps already have been taken to give the Philippine Islands independence that insular possession has been left under War Department jurisdiction. The Canal Zone also will remain in the War Department, since its administration is primarily concerned with national defense. For the same reason the relatively unimportant possessions of Guam, American Samoa and Wake in the Midway Islands will remain under the Navy Department.

Appointment of Dr. Gruening launches the latest experiment undertaken by the Roosevelt Administration. It is designed to establish a colonial career service and get administration of the country's far-flung possessions eventually out of the hands of purely political appointees. The goal will be to improve living conditions in these possessions, raise their economic standards and if possible, lessen

Explorer So Ill in June He Feared Relief Would Arrive Too Late.

Little America, Antarctica, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—A message from Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's advance base revealed today that the noted explorer was so ill in June he wrote a note and placed it where the relief party could find it, fearing the party might "arrive too late."

Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, leader of the tractor expedition now at the advance base, reported in a radio message that the note referred to letters Byrd had written to various persons and told where they could be found.

Dr. Poulter said that, although the Admiral is showing marked improvement, it will be some time before he fully recovers.

"He was true to the Polar code and played the man gallantly," Dr. Poulter reported, despite the fact that "he has gone through things * * * that must have been beyond human ability to withstand."

The message revealed that Admiral Byrd, after recovering slightly about June 21 from the effects of fumes, suffered a relapse in July which "was quite as severe as the first."

Milk Producers Defy Order to Raise Prices

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 16 (A.P.). The end of its first day under the regulations of the Virginia milk control commission found some Charlottesville residents and milk producers taking a firm stand against the control and price-fixing regulations issued by the commission.

"We are not going to raise our prices one cent until we are forced to jail," L. A. Ward, president of the Albemarle Independent Association, declared. "We are against placing any additional burdens on our consumers and we do not intend to raise our prices until costs justify it."

Bond Pact Signed With San Domingo

U. S. Achieves First Real Victory for Holders of Foreign Securities.

Two Issues Amounting to $16,250,000 Are Involved.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Announcement was made by the State Department yesterday that the Dominican Republic, setting "an example worthy of emulation" by other Latin-American countries, has negotiated a thoroughly satisfactory agreement with the Council for the Protection of Foreign Bond Holders.

Terms of the settlement were declared by the council not only "fair to the republic" but also "distinctly advantageous" to the bondholders. It was clear that the council, in approving its first full refinancing operation, hoped it will prove the first step of Latin-American countries out of the bond morass of recent years.

Disclosure of the adjustment, which involves two bond issues approximating $16,250,000, was timed to coincide with the inauguration of Rafael L. Trujillo for a second four-year term as President of the republic.

Full credit was accorded the youthful executive for the settlement, which briefly provides:

Provisions of Settlement.

1. Continuation of present 5½ per cent interest payments.
2. Modification of sinking fund requirements, together with extension of both issues by 20 and 30 years.
3. Restoration of the treaty giving this Government supervision of the collection of custom receipts.

Under the agreement, the Guarantee Trust Co., as fiscal agent for the Dominican Republic, will notify the bondholders of the council's action. Although individual acceptances must be obtained as a matter of fact, no other course but to abide by the terms is open to the bondholders, who are estimated to number about 5,000.

Explaining the settlement, J. Reuben Clark, jr., former Ambassador to Mexico, who heads the bondholders' protective council, expressed the council's "congratulation" to President Trujillo and the republic. He characterized as "impossible" the terms of the original issues, explaining that they placed too great a strain on the country's resources.

Bonds Floated in 1922 and 1926.

The bond issues in question were floated in 1922 and 1926, maturing in 1942 and 1940, respectively. Each amounted to $10,000,000, but sufficient amortization has been paid to reduce the principal outstanding to slightly more than $16,250,000. Sinking fund requirements were to begin in 1930, but the next year an emergency law was enacted suspending such payments, although the republic continued to be one of the few Latin-American countries meeting interest in full.

The agreement provides for 1½ per cent amortization this year, relatively small sinking fund payments from 1935 to 1939, and thereafter 1 per cent annual payments on the 1940 issue and 1½ per cent on the 1942 issue. The first issue is to be retired in 1970; the second in 1962. Neither issue will be callable before 1945.

In accordance with provisions of

Italy Recalls Troops From Austrian Border

Rome, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Indications that Italy feels the new Fascist administration in Austria controls the situation were seen tonight in an order for withdrawal of Italian reinforcements along the Austro-Italian frontier.

An official communique announced that the divisions concentrated on the north and northeastern frontiers were returning to their respective headquarters—which, incidentally, are still within the border area.

300,000 Textile Workers Called Out by Sept. 1

Actual Date to Be Kept Secret by Decree of Convention.

Pay Boost, More Jobs Among Aims

President Admits Money Is Lacking to Finance Walkout.

New York, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—A Nation-wide strike in the cotton textile industry on or before September 1 was voted today at the annual convention of the United Textile Workers of America.

The strike will affect 500,000 workers, leaders said, particularly in the South and New England. The union has a total membership of about 300,000.

The resolution, approved by all but 10 of the 571 delegates, empowers the incoming executive council to call the strike. The council, which has yet to be elected, will meet Saturday at the close of the convention. The date of the strike will be kept secret and employers given no more than 12 hours' notice, it was said.

Argument Lasts Hours.

The vote on the strike was taken after hours of intense discussion, most of it favoring a strike, and after Thomas F. McMahon, president of the union, had admitted the organization has no money to finance local unions through the siege.

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, was one of those who urged the textile workers to "fight for justice."

McMahon said the present executive council had discussed the strike proposal for three days before urging it on the convention.

"We are not desirous of creating chaos," he asserted. "I would hate to give my consent to anything like that unless I was absolutely convinced it was the only way out. There is no other way.

"We will say to the manufacturers: Now that we know the power we possess, we will wield it, but we will wield it intelligently and reasonably."

Worker Shot and Beaten.

W. M. Adcock, of Huntsville, Ala., showed scars on his head received, he said, in the present strike in his State, but declared he was "willing to shed my blood against the capitalists." He limped off the platform, saying he had been shot in the leg as well as beaten.

Wage increases, shorter hours, differentials in the higher wage brackets and an end to the "stretch-out" are objectives sought. The workers also want limitation of the machine load so as to provide more employment.

Thomas promised his help "if you vote that strike in the textile industry."

"The NRA is going to be used to standardize working conditions for the benefit of the bosses," he asserted. "Today the whole operation of the NRA favors company unions provided they are careful."

He called Gen. Hugh S. Johnson,

Long Program To "Spite" City Passes House

Louisiana Legislature Bows to Kingfish in Session of Wild Confusion.

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 16 (A.P.). After a roaring session, in which threats were hurled, fists shaken and curses yelled, the Huey Long majority in the House tonight passed his program, which the minority said was "spite" legislation against New Orleans.

The bills were sent to the Senate for quick action and an expected end of the special session Saturday or Sunday.

The bills, which Long said were intended to insure "honest elections," were shot through by heavy majorities in spite of vigorous arguments against them by the anti-Long group.

The most heated scene of the day was staged in front of the Speaker's stand over a motion by Representative George M. Lester to invoke the antilobbying rule, to exclude "Long and his henchmen" from the chamber because Long had been shouting directions to his leaders from behind the rail.

Members of the clashing factions ran down front, waving arms, shaking fists and shouting.

"Damn you, I'm not a henchman," and "You can't say that about me," were yelled in the stampede.

Long, with Gov. O. K. Allen close by, looked on. After the administration had attempted to expel the press along with the lobbyists, Lester modified his demand and the speaker quelled the trouble, accusing the Legislators of being "childish."

One of the principal bills passed in the House would create a State police force which Long's opposition said would authorize State police power in the cities and supersede

Girl, 18, Setting Fast Pace In Swim Across Lake Erie

Sandusky, Ohio, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—In the blackness of Lake Erie, with the wind becoming colder and the waves pitching higher, plucky Florence Brushaber, 18, of Sandusky, was swimming steadily from the Canadian to the American shore across Lake Erie tonight. She expects to finish her swim in 32 hours.

The girl, who until two months ago never swam more than 3 miles, at 7 p. m. had put behind her approximately 10 miles of her 33-mile trip. She was using a steady crawl stroke altogether and appeared to be making better time than earlier in the day.

Clad only in a thick coat of black grease and a pair of goggles, the comely young woman slipped into the water at Point Pelee, Ontario, at 10:55 a. m. today, confident and smiling.

So far, throughout the struggle, which she expected would take about 32 hours, the girl has joked with her attendants, and has shown no signs of fatigue.

As dusk fell over the lake a group of Canadian fishermen who had seen Miss Brushaber start off, came to her side in their boat and presented her with a lucky penny to carry through the night.

Miss Brushaber made the first 5¾ miles in 3 hours and 14 minutes, a rate of 1 mile in 36.96 minutes, much faster than she expected for the entire distance.

Closely following her was a boat carry her high school coach, Otto Schell, her brother-in-law, E. G. Faulkner, and a party of assistants. It was followed by a Coast Guard boat in charge of Boatman Howard White.

Before her start the girl ate a solid breakfast of fried bacon and eggs, but during the trip her nourishment was limited to liquid foods, principally meat broth and cocoa, which Coach Schell prepared from time to time aboard the Coast Guard craft. Florence planned to drink the nourishment at two-hour intervals.

Dancing Firemen Save Md. Records

Prompt Arrival From Fete Nips Court Blaze.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—St. Marys County officials today looked over their fire-scarred courthouse and decided that last night's firemen's dance probably saved county records for the past 100 years.

The Leonardtown Volunteer Fire Department was holding a housewarming in its new headquarters, when Nelson Smallwood, courthouse janitor, discovered the fast-spreading blaze. He grabbed a telephone and the operator opened the town siren.

Before the howls of the alarm had died away, the firemen, better dressed than at any local fire in years, were on the job. Officials said the fighters' quick work alone was responsible for keeping the damage down to an estimated $3,000 and preventing spread to the records.

Nye Denounces Price-Fixing In NRA Tire Code

"Device to Gouge Public, Ruin Small Dealers," Johnson Told.

Emergency price-fixing in the NRA tire code was denounced yesterday by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, as "a device to gouge the consumer and put small companies out of business."

Senator Nye made public a sharp telegram of criticism to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and a brief reply from the recovery administrator in which he defended the plan as a means of preserving the little fellow.

"Last May," commented Senator Nye, "Gen. Johnson issued an order establishing a mandatory price for tires, below which no member of the trade could sell his product.

"As a result every automobile owner in America has had to pay more for his tires, despite the fact that prices already had increased as much as 30 to 40 per cent prior to this order. There have been three price increases in the past 15 months.

Demand New Increase

"Not content with this tremendous increase, the dominant tire manufacturers are demanding that NRA further increase basic prices about 10 per cent over the present figure on first grade passenger car tires, 7 per cent on second grade tires and 9½ per cent on truck tires."

Already, the Senator added, "millions of dollars" are being added to the Nation's tire bill.

"It is axiomatic," Senator Nye charged, "that the smaller companies with limited sales distribution forces and small advertising budgets can not compete with monopoly if they are forced by the Government to sell their tires at the same price.

"Some of these smaller companies have done a comparatively large annual business. They have kept their employes at work throughout the depression. They will not be able to continue to do so if they are to be sacrificed to the profit of their dominant competitors.

Answer Not Conclusive.

"Gen. Johnson informs me that this matter is under advisement. This is inconclusive. Unless that advisement results in a remedy that protects both the public and the small manufacturer, there are many in Congress and elsewhere who will have grave doubts if NRA in its present form is fit to survive the present term of its legal existence."

Senator Nye's telegram to Gen. Johnson follows:

"Strong evidence has been presented to me that the public is being gouged under the so-called emergency price-fixing order in the rubber tire code. I understand that the price-fixing agreement was reached at the instance of the so-called Big Four who are alleged to be the controlling factor in the industry and some few other rubber leaders on the excuse of preventing price war.

"The arrangement looks suspiciously like a plan to ultimately elminate lesser and smaller tire manufacturers who must sell at the same price as the Big Four, who have the advantage of larger capital and National advertising to insure consumer acceptance.

"Present proposal to increase floor price would hasten destruction of competition and further subsidize Big Four at consumer expense. I hold no brief for manufacturer and distributor who sell at less than cost or who do not pay labor justly, but I understand that those being threatened with destruction by agreement are complying with wages and hours provisions and have a present advantage only because of lower overhead and absence of watered capitalization.

Urges Drastic Action.

"I appreciate changes which NRA has instituted in keeping with some of the Darrow board recommendations, but if there is hope of salvaging and saving the large features of NRA after June 15 next year there must be drastic moves to clean up flagrant abuses which still linger, such as that seeming to continue in the tire industry code. I suggest your immediate investigation and action."

Gen. Johnson's reply follows:

"Matter mentioned in your telegram now under advisement. The plan would preserve rather than destroy the little fellow. I find that it relates more to the consumer due to the increase in prices."

2,000 Workers Strike In Two Georgia Mills

Columbus, Ga., Aug. 16 (AP).—Charging intimidation and discharge of employes who joined the union, approximately 2,000 workers in the Eagle and Phenix mills struck here today.

The mills operated, although only 200 employes reported for work. Strikers formed picket lines, but there were no disorders.

Strike leaders appealed to Gov. Talmadge for aid in settling the dispute. The Governor immediately got in touch with labor leaders and J. P. McGrath, secretary of the Georgia Manufacturers Association, asking them to use their influence in settling the strike.

1,000 Strike in Boston.

Boston, Aug. 16 (AP).—Nearly 1,000 members of Boston locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, employed in 35 shops, went out on strike today in protest of a wage reduction.

The strike was ordered by Jacob Bloom, general manager of the Boston joint board of the union, who said the situation was brought about by "contract shops" proprietors who broke down the regular union scale.

A meeting of manufacturers and workers' representatives was scheduled for Monday, with factories closed in the meantime.

Mellon's Office Disowns Purchase of Painting

The Pittsburgh office of Andrew W. Mellon yesterday denied he has purchased Raphael's "Alba Madonna," shown above. The former Secretary of the Treasury was reported to have acquired the painting from the Soviet government for a consideration of $1,500,000.

Ku Klux Klan Declares War On Huey Long

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Klansmen attending their imperial klonvokation here this week devoted a large part of their time in secret meetings condemning the "un-American tactics" of the Louisiana Kingfish.

A formal resolution attacking the Senator from Louisiana "for his tactics in endeavoring to undermine constitutional republican government in America" was kept off the floor by the imperial wizard, who advised against getting into an open contest "with a polecat."

It was then decided to "go after" the Kingfish in a "quiet way."

Dr. Hiram W. Evans, reelected to a four-year term as imperial wizard, explained to the United Press:

"The klan, with its knowledge of the necessity for the preservation of the courts and their vital importance to constitutional government, was emphatic in its denunciation of Long's un-American tactics, but I did not deem it advisable to dignify the Kingfish by letting his name appear upon the floor for discussion."

Dr. Evans added:

"The 40,000 klansmen in Louisiana, added to the vast army of decent people now aroused, will without question take care of the Kingfish the next time he comes before the bar of public opinion, providing, of course, the Federal Government does not take care of Senator Long's situation sooner."

Long is just one "of the individuals in high places who seems to have a wrong conception of constitutional government" to be ferreted out in the new program of the reincarnated band that helped rid the South of "carpetbagger" rule in Civil War reconstruction days, the klan contended.

The klan adjourned its seventh klonvokation here, attended by 620 delegates representing all sections of the country, after agreeing to sponsor in State Legislatures and Congress bills to enable more stringent prosecution of "alien radicals."

Huey Trembles—With Rage.

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Senator Huey P. Long trembled with rage tonight when informed that the Ku Klux Klan was "out to get him," under the leadership of Imperial Wizard Dr. Hiram W. Evans.

The Kingfish gave the following statement to the United Press as he stood in the Statehouse watching his Legislature in action:

"You tell that tooth-puller that he is a * * * lying * * * I know him personally. This isn't second-hand information and it isn't confidential."

Textile Union Chief Named to NRA Board

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, yesterday was appointed a member of the NRA Labor Advisory Board by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

The appointment was said to have no connection with the decision of the United Textile Workers at New York convention to begin a general strike on or before September 1.

Louisiana House Backs Long 'Spite' Program Against City

the local police. It was voted, 57 to 36.

It was disclosed tonght that $40,000 from an increase voted by the House in the corporation franchise tax would go to financing a State constabulary for this job and to pay the expenses of legislatvie investigation in to the affairs of the city government and courts of New Orleans.

$240,000 For Relief.

The estimated balance of the increase, $240,000 was consigned to emergency unemployment relief. The House bill would raise the corporation franchise tax from $1.25 per $1,000 to $1.50.

As soon as the House finished with the bills they were all quickly referred to the finance committee in a brief Senate session.

One of the bills passed would protect the voters registration books from seizure under court order. It passed the House 62 to 27. The New Orleans registration books are now in charge of the National Guard there, where Long is battling with Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley for victory in the September -- Congressional primary.

Other measures aimed at increasing Senator Long's power in State affairs and crippling the forces of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley in New Orleans were pushed through in the morning session.

Senator Long was moving across the rear of the House chamber late in the afternoon, conferring with his leaders, when Representative Lester leaped to his feet and cried:

"Mr. Speaker, I move for the full invoking of rule 20, the antilobbying rule. I move that the entire chamber be cleared of outsiders. Huey P. Long and his henchmen are shouting orders to members on the floor of this House."

"Will that include the press, also?" another representative asked.

"Yes, yes, put the press out," shouted a dozen members.

Above the uproar, Ellender called to newspapermen:

"I will ask the press to keep this out. It's a lot to do about nothing."

Lester then temporarily withdrew his motion.

The Senator stood at the rear of the chamber, behind the rail, watching one after another of his bills flash to victory across the electric voting machine. He never batted an eye at shouts of "damn crook" and "spurious Hitler," which critics hurled in his direction.

Showing a following of 60 in the 100-member House, the Long forces put through in a two-hour sitting bills:

To prohibit the courts from interfering with the militia when it is under mobilization orders of the Governor, as is now the case in New Orleans, where troops hold the city voting registration office, despite a district court injunction;

To empower the Governor-appointed board of elections supervisors to name special representatives at the polls in primaries such as the Congressional primary scheduled for September 11;

To place the ballots and other election paraphernalia in the hands of elections board representatives instead of local deputy sheriffs;

And to prohibit the City of New Orleans, with whose officials Senator Long is at war, from taxing anything not already taxed by the State.

People Warned Rights Threatened.

Eighteen members of the House from parishes outside of New Orleans issued a formal statement, describing the procedure as "Hitlerism" and "warning" that the measures were shaped to extend State administration control "over the entire State."

"We members of the Legislature from the country parishes," the statement said, "deem it imperative to let the people of Louisiana know at this time the true meaning back of this special session, for legislation has been introduced which strikes at the very foundation of our liberties and would take from us the last vestige of our sacred Constitutional rights, not only in New Orleans, but in the entire State."

Meanwhile in New Orleans Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley called upon the people to act in the crisis.

"Have the money gods gone mad so that water flows in the veins of the people of Louisiana?" he asked. "What manner of people are we, the citizens of Louisiana, who permit this continuous tyranny?"

United States Marshal Named.

The Federal grand jury heard more witnesses in New Orleans in its investigation of income tax returns of Senator Long and some of his asosciates. Judge Walter Gleason, of civil district court, a supreme court justice candidate in the September primary, refused to handle litigation in the political squabble, referring it to Judge Nat Bond, of the same court, who has returned numerous decisions favoring Walmsley.

Another blow was struck at Senator Long when President Roosevelt today appointed Sidney A. Freudenstein, an anti-Long man, as United States marshal for the Eastern District of Louisiana, to succeed Tom Dutton, a Hoover appointee.

D. C. - Nashville Lighted Airway Funds Granted

$465,000 From PWA to Prepare Route for Night Flying.

Installation of lighted airway between Washington and Nashville, Tenn., was made possible yesterday by the allotment of $465,000 in PWA funds to the Bureau of Air Commerce of the Department of Commerce.

Officials explained that the lighted airway, to be 580 miles long, would do away with the present emergency flying conditions on the route. Mail planes now are reported to be unable to fly at night because of the lack of proper facilities.

The route will run from Washington via of Lynchburg and Roanoke, Va., through Bristol and Knoxville to Nashville. Standard aviation beacons and emergency landing fields will be installed.

In addition, 11 small radio stations will be located along the route to provide radio range service and point-to-point communication for use in collecting weather information.

These stations will be installed at Culpeper, Warrenton, Lynchburg, Pulaski and Marion, Va., and Bristol, Morristown, Knoxville, Harriman and Sparta, Tenn.

The project will require about ten months to complete and is expected to provide 64,000 man-hours of employment.

The PWA also alloted $508,000 to The Aeronautics Branch of the Commerce Department to complete the "master series" of aviation navigation maps of the United States, regarded as important in the development of aviation in this country.

proceeding East along the Egremont road about 10 a. m. Tuesday.

As they approached the Wyoming road, he said, another car came out of a side road and darted ahead of the other two. He positively identified one of the machines as Labatt's.

Others, including D. Jackson, station agent at Camlachie, Archie Dewar and Willard Anderson, farmers, said three or four men stepped from two automobiles on the Egremont road, and that one of them apparently was being pushed into a machine, which drove away.

Their story upset a theory Labatt had been kidnaped while driving on the Sarnia-London highway.

Hugh Labatt, who rushed here shortly after his brother was seized and held for $150,000 ransom on Tuesday, departed unobtrusively from his hotel headquarters.

The headquarters remained a scene of activity all day with various persons calling there. It had been assumed that negotiations were being conducted there.

The telephone contact was established early this morning, and it apparently was shortly after that time that Hugh Labatt departed.

Complete secrecy surrounded the movements of the go-between, while a considerable number of police remained on duty at the hotel.

Whether Hugh Labatt was making personal contact to deliver the $150,000 he is reported to have brought to Toronto could not be established.

"Mr. Labatt will not be back tonight," said a spokesman in his hotel suite. A number of police officers were found sitting there after Inspector John Miller of the provincial police had revealed that Labatt was gone.

Mrs. Hugh Labatt said at her home in London that her husband had not been there and that she had not heard from him since he went to Toronto shortly after the kidnaping.

Gen. S. C. Mewburn, head of the Ontario detachment of the Royal Mounted and uncle by marriage of the kidnaped man, visited the hotel suite here during the afternoon.

In Detroit it was asserted that no fingerprints had been found in the abandoned Labatt car, but an inference that some prints were available was drawn from a remark of a police officer here this afternoon.

May Have Clew.

Hazarding a guess, an observer said "around Toronto it is believed that the Dillinger gang did the job."

"We don't think so," was the police reply. "We have fingerprints of all the Dillinger gang."

This was taken to indicate that something was available in the way of prints of the man who wrote the ransom note and signed it "Three-Fingered Abe."

Detroit took an active part in the investigation, despite denials that any definite "lead" had been found there.

Chief of Detectives Fred W. Frahm, of Detroit, ordered the full manpower of the homicide, holdup and special investigations squads to concentrate on the search for the kidnapers.

This action followed a conference of the Detroit chief with Sergt. Ted Weis, of the Royal Mounted, and three officers from Toronto.

Massie Offers Aid.

An earlier interest in Joe Massie, former liquor runner and defendant in an indefinitely postponed Detroit murder case, appeared without foundation when Massie was located in his home in Detroit.

Mention of the name "Massie" led to an interview in which Joe Massie declared that he is "just as much against kidnaping as the chief of police. It's a dirty racket." He said that he would be glad to help if he can in the investigation.

While Canadian and Detroit officers joined in denying that any fingerprints were found on the automobile from which Labatt was kidnaped, prints were reported being sent from Detroit to Albany, N. Y. Police there said they probably were intended for comparison with those of three missing Albany men sought in connection with the John J. O'Connell, jr., kidnaping a year ago.

Ickes Calls PWA Workers Too Busy To Play Politics

Secretary Ickes said yesterday he has no intention of issuing any general order prohibiting PWA employes from engaging in politics, as has the Treasury Department and the Federal Home Loan Board.

"Our employes are too busy to engage in politics," he said, "and besides, this is not a political organization."

He added that if any flagrant instances of political activity are brought to his attention he will have something to say.

Virginia Opens Drive Upon Illegal Trucks

Dr. Rosenow to Fight Paralysis in Cuba

Rochester, Minn., Aug. 16 (AP).—Dr. C. Rosenow, head of the division of experimental bacteriology in the Mayo Foundation, said today he had received a cablegram from President Carlos Mendieta of Cuba, inviting him to fight infantile paralysis there.

Dr. Rosenow said he probably would go and take with him a quantity of serum.

Grocers Adopt Graded Foods Labels of NRA

NRA has begun receiving promises from large chain grocers to place Department of Agriculture grades on the labels of all canned goods they sell, officials announced.

"The immediate and favorable results from the present drive to make canned food labels more informative have been very gratifying to NRA," an official announcement commented.

"Past efforts of consumers and Governmental agencies in the same direction have met with little or no success. The present campaign was started when President Roosevelt demanded as a condition of his approval of the canning industry code that a committee recommend provisions on standards for inclusion in that code."

The announcement characterized as "a considerable forward step" plans by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. to adopt the Government gradings on all canned food labels. That company's private and controlled brands were said to include 10 per cent of the canned goods consumed in America annually.

NRA also expressed "satisfaction" with an announcement by Libby, McNeill & Libby, large Chicago packers of canned food, that they would begin using labels containing new informatiin.

Officials declared NRA would regard ultimate success in the drive as of great advantage to housewives and as an achievement comparable to the ban on child labor effected by codes for virtually all of the country's large and small industries.

Finch Is Named New Chief for Mines Bureau

Idahoan Appointed After Farley Questioning of Political Faith.

Prof. John Wellington Finch, who supported President Hoover in 1928 and President Roosevelt in 1932, yesterday was appointed director of the Bureau of Mines after his political qualifications had been investigated by Postmaster General James Farley.

Prof. Finch's appointment set at rest speculations in both Republican and Democratic camps, aroused when Mr. Farley held up his official confirmation after he had resigned as dean of the University of Idaho Mining School and came expectantly to Washington.

Coincident with the appointment, Scott Turner, of Lansing, Mich., a Coolidge appointee, made public a letter of resignation sent to President Roosevelt on July 6.

"It came to my knowledge at 10 o'clock Monday morning, July 2, that complete arrangements had been made to install my successor at that hour," Turner wrote the President. "No previous intimation of the intended change had reached me.

"At 10, one of the group of Government officials instructed to witness the ceremony arrived at my office and told me why he had come. However, no others appeared and no ceremony took place."

Prof. Finch appeared at the Department of Interior the same day, just after the President had departed on his Hawaiian cruise, prepared to take the oath of office for the $8,000-a-year post.

Appointment Held Up.

When Secretary Harold L. Ickes called the White House to inquire about the appointment papers, he learned that the President had withheld his signature. Attached to the unsigned commission was a note:

"Held up temporarily because of political objections by P. M. G."

Prof. Finch thereupon returned to Moscow, Idaho, and withdrew his resignation from the university.

Since the President's return to Washington, Secretary Ickes is reported to have talked with him about Finch's qualifications, and Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, is said to have done what he could to set at rest Mr. Farley's political doubts.

Mr. Turner, in his communication to Roosevelt on July 6, said that the unsuccessful, "abrupt and unannounced move to change the administration of the Bureau of Mines would have been so at variance with precedent in this and other technical bureaus in Washington that I was at loss to understand its justification."

Turner Opposed Transfer.

He added that he would be engaged in winding up his affairs at the bureau until the President notified him of the effective date of his resignation.

On last Wednesday the President wrote Turner a letter accepting the resignation, effective at once, and thanked him "for your courteous attitude in withholding this resignation so far as its effective date was concerned until I returned from my trip."

The Bureau of Mines was formerly under the Department of Commerce, but transferred to the Interior Department after Mr. Ickes took charge.

The Secretary of the Interior told newspapermen at the time Finch's appointment was scheduled to be made that Turner had not so much as come to his office and introduced himself since the transfer.

Yesterday Turner told newspapermen that he had written to Ickes, offering to discuss bureau matters with him, but had never received a call. Turner is understood to have vigorously opposed the transfer of the Bureau of Mines.

Ickes Fires "Inside" Man

Texan Who Used Influence for Private Projects Is Discharged.

Secretary Ickes told reporters yesterday Fred R. Deaton, of Texas, had been dismissed from the Public Works Administration for activities in the interest of private persons seeking public works projects in Texas, the Associated Press reported.

Ickes said the case was "flagrant" and that Deaton had been dismissed "with prejudice."

Deaton had been a group supervisor in the finance division. Ickes said he had been carrying on a private correspondence from his residence with "persons interested in private projects in Texas."

"Any one down there who wanted to use influence up here," the Secretary said, "seemed to know they ought to write to him."

Ickes said Deaton had asked for, and been granted, a hearing, but that he had "convinced himself on his own case." The dismissed supervisor, the Secretary said, now is [illegible] into the bond business in [illegible] counties.

the revived treaty, the State Department announced that the general receiver of Dominican customs will be instructed at once to take charge. This is provided specifically in the agreement, which was negotiated voluntarily, it was emphasized by President Trujillo.

Meanwhile, the Dominican Legation released a statement by Joseph E. Davies, counsel for the republic, declaring that American holders of Dominican bonds are obtaining "a better bond than they had before." He pointed out that the republic is the first Latin-American nation to adjust its bond relations, that President Trujillo is leading the way for South America back to financial normalcy, and that the republic is appreciative of the "good neighbor" policy of the Administration.

A letter from Acting Secretary of State William Phillips to Roberto Despradel, Dominican Minister, expressed by inference the Administration hope that other countries will see fit to negotiate such favorable settlements. He asserted that "in the substantial effort which the Dominican government is thus making to meet, as far as it feels able, its pledged faith on its financial obligations, the Dominican government has set an example worthy of emulation."

The bondholders' protective council, consisting of such members as Mr. Clark, Newton D. Baker, Thomas Thatcher and Rollin Morris, was organized last year under the auspices of President Roosevelt. With headquarters in New York, it has been conducting negotiations with a score of foreign countries in the interest of American bondholders. Favorable concessions have been obtained in the case of some Brazilian and some German bond payments, but the Dominican settlement is its first complete adjustment.

Woman, 40, Is Jailed In Killing of Banker

Seymour, Tex., Aug. 16 (AP).—Miss Ruby Britain, 40, was in jail here tonight charged with murdering H. Nichols, 38-year-old Seymour bank official, shot to death as he sat in his motor car with a 19-year-old girl.

Nichols, married and the father of two children, parked his motor car on a country road near Seymour last night with Miss Willie Mae Couch, 19. Police said a woman drove alongside and opened fire with a pistol. Nichols staggered from his automobile and fell dead.

"Rasputin" Libel Brings $250,000

The costs were estimated at between $65,000 and $75,000.

The total amount of the settlement, Miss Holtzmann said, includes the £25,000 (approximately $127,000) awarded the Princess in the suit tried in an English court.

Suits were being prepared at the time the settlement was reached for filing in every country where the film was shown.

The suit was based on an allegation that the character Natasha in the film, pictured as an adultress, could be identified with the plaintiff.

British lawyers said the settlement was the highest ever paid in a libel suit in the world.

"In fairness to all parties I have decided to end the guessing game and state the exact amount," Miss Holtzmann said. "The Princess always stated she was not out to recover stupendous damages but chiefly was interested in halting the libel."

The Princess herself said:

"I left the terms of the settlement entirely to Miss Holtzmann and her brother, Jacob, of New York, and the counsel for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"I am especially gratified that the sum is satisfactory to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as well as to myself."

Miss Holtzmann gave a farewell party for the Princess tonight which was attended by the same distinguished guests present at the "victory celebration" last Friday.

Johnson's Name Stays On Ballot, Court Rules

San Francisco, Aug. 16 (AP).—Senator Hiram Johnson will retain his position on the ballot of the California primary election August 28, the State Supreme Court decreed today.

M. May's Body Is Borne Home By U. S. Cruiser

Rites Held in Arlington for Belgian Diplomat Who Died Here.

Carried aboard the heavy cruiser Pensacola at Annapolis, the body of Paul May, the late Belgian Ambsssador, started its homeward journey yesterday.

Dave H. Morris, American Ambassador to Belgium, and Richard Southgate, assistant chief of the State Department protocol division, will escort the body to Brussels.

Guns of the Pensacola boomed a salute as the launch bearing the body drew alongside yesterday. Naval officers and eight companies of midshipmen formed the procession from the Naval Academy gates to the wharf.

High governmental officials and representatives of many embassies and legations attended military rites at Arlington Cemetery when the body of the ambassador was removed from the vault.

While dignitaries stood aside with bared heads, a black casket was placed upon a caisson and borne, to the beat of muffled drums, to the cemetery gate where a motor cortege waited.

Immediately behind the caisson walked the widow and daughter, followed by members of the Belgian Embassy staff and servants who carried the many decorations received by Mr. May in his diplomatic career.

When the procession reached the gate and the casket was placed in a motor hearse, the Third Cavalry Band, part of the escort, played the Belgian National Anthem. Nineteen guns sounded as the motorcade started away from the cemetery.

The Ambassador's widow and daughter, Mlle. Francoise May, will sail Saturday on the Ile de France for their home. The ambassador died July 30 at Emergency Hospital following an operation.

Philippine Tariffs Hit by Japanese

Manila, Aug. 16 (AP).—Count Atsushi Kimura, Japanese consul general, issued a warning today that there "probably would be serious effects" from the proposed increase of Philippine tariffs.

These are designed to protect American goods entering the islands, with the aim of preserving as far as possible the present free trade with the United States.

Addressing students of the University of the Philippines, Kimura predicted that during the transition period preceding Philippine independence "American trade with the Philippines will gradually sink and Japanese-Philippine trade will correspondingly increase" as full independence approaches, about 1945.

competition between them and producers on the mainland.

The object of the Administration in this venture is to transform the natives of the country's possessions from "forgotten men" and dependent "little brown and black brothers" to communities able to care for themselves and provide an outlet for part of this country's surplus industrial production.

Scored Haiti Occupation.

Dr. Gruening's qualifications are regarded by the Roosevelt Administration as particularly fitting him for carrying on this task. For years he has been keenly and actively interested in American relations in Mexico, the Caribbean and Central America. His book, "Mexico and Its Heritage," published in 1928, is held to be the standard work on Mexico.

As managing editor of the Nation he vigorously protested after the World War against continuance of the American occupation in Haiti, which by a coincidence came to an official end Wednesday. He was instrumental in projecting the American occupation in Haiti as an issue into the 1920 Presidential election. This led to a Senatorial inquiry and he was sent to Haiti in advance of the McCormick committee to arrange proceedings for hearings and the investigation there.

He has been a staunch opponent of military and financial intervention by the United States into the affairs of the Latin-American countries, favored abrogation of the Platt amendment and a more neighborly attitude on the part of this country toward the nations south of the Rio Grande.

Scored at Montevideo.

Last fall President Roosevelt named Dr. Gruening as general advisor to the United States delegation to the Seventh Pan-American conference at Montevideo. The fact that this conference was more successful than previous meetings was attributed in part to Dr. Gruening's advice. More recently he served as a member of a commission sent to Cuba by the Foreign Policy Association at the invitation of President Carlos Mendieta to make an economic and social survey of that country.

Born 47 years ago in New York City, Dr. Gruening graduated from Harvard University—President Roosevelt's university—in 1907 and four years later received his degree from the same institution as a physician. He turned away from medicine, however, even before receiving his "M. D." and started a journalistic career on the Boston American.

After coming up through the ranks he served as managing editor of the Boston Traveler from 1914 to 1916 and then went to the old New York Tribune as managing editor. During the war he was in the field artillery, subsequently serving breifly as general manager of the Spanish language paper La Prensa in New York and then as managing editor of the Nation, liberal weekly.

La Follette Publicity Agent.

He remained actively with The Nation until 1923, remaining until last winter on its board of associate editors. He was National publicity director for the La Follette Presidential campaign in 1924. He spent the years from 1924 to 1926 in Mexico, gathering material for his book. In 1927 he became the publisher and editor of the Portland (Me.) Evening News, continuing as its editor until 1932.

While directing the Portland Evening News Dr. Gurening received National prominence for his continued attacks on the Insull power interests which, he charged, was dominating the State politically and economically in order to advance their hydroelectric power projects.

After his return from the Montevideo conference early this year, Dr. Gruening became editor of the New York Evening Post under its new ownership of J. David Stern. He resigned, however, in April, devoting himself to writing on Latin-American questions.

Slaying Bared In Confession

Accomplice to Help State in Battle to Send Woman to Chair.

Cooperstown, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Eva Coo, roadhouse proprietress, learned today that she alone faces the electric chair in the slaying of her handyman, Harry Wright.

District Attorney Donald H. Grant announced on the fourth day of her trial that she has agreed to allow Mrs. Martha Clift, confessed accessory, to plead guilty to a charge of second degree murder.

Mrs. Clift is expected to be the chief witness for the State in its efforts to place Mrs. Coo's name high on the list of women who have been electrocuted in New York State for murder. A brunette who frequently stayed at Mrs. Coo's Woodbine Inn, Mrs. Clift signed a statement June 20, in which she said she drove an automobile over Wright's body after Mrs. Coo had hit him on the head with a mallet.

Chief Defense Counsel James J. Byard, jr., served notice today in opening his case that he would "fight to the last ditch" against introduction of another reported confession, that signed by Mrs. Coo. The blonde defendant signed that confession, he said, after being "tortured two days and a night."

Rise in Hogs Puts Price at 3-Year Peak

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Skyrocketing hog prices were hailed by live-stock raisers tonight as a harbinger of returning prosperity to millions of Middle Western farmers.

Top quotations on hogs reached $6.50 per 100 pounds for the first time in more than three years as packers competed in bidding.

After several months of steady rising, prices gained sudden momentum a week ago. Quotations reached 30 per cent above a month ago and 75 per cent above the low of last spring.

Cost of finished products—pork chops, bacon, sausage and ham—have increased 25 per cent to consumers in the past two months. Unless there is an unexpected break another 20 per cent increase will result soon, packers said.

Says Packers Lose Money.

One large Chicago packing house, which supplies butchers in all parts of the country, said packers are losing money at present rates. Little prospect of a break was seen.

Ordinarily the retail price of meat products governs the price paid to the producer. The market, however, at present is influenced principally by the short pig crop of last spring and the prospect of a greatly reduced corn crop, packers said.

Anticipating a shortage in pork this winter, packers bid up prices sharply. The advance on the Chicago market today was 30 to 40 cents. In other markets the increases ranged from 15 to 50 cents.

Live stock commission men said the present sensational rise has resulted from the law of supply and demand. While the demand has been brisk, the supply has been rather light.

A primary factor in the short hog crop was the Government's pig-killing program last spring. The spring pig crop was reduced by 20 to 30 per cent below normal. Many brood sows were killed, reducing the prospective fall pig crop.

Fewer Hogs on Farms.

Hogs remaining on the farm for fall fattening are fewer, due to the drought, which dried up grazing. Higher corn prices will make the cost of fattening hogs considerably higher, live stock men said.

The value of full carload lots today, tax included, was nearly double that of the same day in 1933. Carloads of 20,000 pounds cost packers an average of $1,610, including $450 processing tax.

A year ago the packers bought similar shipments for an average of $790. At the low point of the depression a carload cost around $600.

Quotations today were the highest since the summer of 1931. The advance from the low of last month was $1.65 to $1.75. Top grades cost the packers $8.75, of which $2.25 went to the Government for processing tax. The price a year ago was around $4.65. In December, 1932, a 54-year low of $3 on top grades was made.

Other live stock failed to follow the advance in hogs. Cattle and sheep remained steady, with choice sheep and lambs gaining only slightly.

U. S. Acts to Save Cattle in Drought higher than two years ago. It said the present index of the farm products group was 67.3 per cent of the 1926 average, with the level for the present week 15 per cent above the corresponding week a year ago and 38 per cent higher than two years ago.

Major items showing increases were meats, butter, cheese and cereal products.

Comprehensive breakdown on food supplies was issued by the Agriculture Department yesterday. It disclosed surpluses in two-thirds of the normal supplies and reported the remaining third was only between 5 and 10 per cent short.

"What shortages do exist," the department said, "can be obviated by slight changes in the national diet." These shifts, it said, "can be accomplished without any material decrease in the nutritional value of the national diet."

The most marked effect of the drought probably will be through meat supplies, the department reported.

Millions of pounds of processed meat are available through the Federal drought slaughter program, but the Administration is looking to the future. Its slaughter plan calls for the ultimate killing and processing of 7,000,000 head. Should the subsistence feeding scheme fail, hundreds of thousands will die of starvation, thus precipitating a shortage crisis.

Crop Control Discussed

Discussing the AAA's crop restriction program again yesterday, Mr. Wallace declined to say what specific restrictions would be raised next year, if any, but he said "mutual safeguards would be provided for both consumer and farmer."

In bumper seasons the farmer must be protected against surpluses and low prices, and in drought times the consumer must be guarded from shortages and high prices, he said. This, in effect, was a reiteration of earlier statements that the AAA will continue its vigilant grip on crop control, relaxing it to give the farmer a break in bad years, but quickly tightening it in years of plenty.

Mr. Wallace said that in his opinion formal statements of drought damage have been excessive. He said the actual loss would be less than $5,000,000,000. Economists have placed the figure $2,000,000,000 higher, and some have said it would reach $10,000,000,000.

The Secretary said relief officials were not worried over shortage of relief funds. He said the balance remaining in the $525,000,000 appropriated by Congress "should carry us through until spring." Relief workers in the field have disagreed with this, saying demands on them are increasing daily and that the fund will be exhausted by the time Congress convenes in January.

La Follette Tells New Platform

More Help for Farmer Laborer Urged.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 16 (AP).—The leader of the new-born Progressive party in Wisconsin, Senator Robert M. La Follette, today declared for a "genuine political realignment" in a platform on which he will seek re-election.

His platform aims at increased governmental assistance for farmer and laborer, and includes among its 20 planks:

Control of credit through a Government-owned central bank, Federal and State development of electric power and municipal operation of public utilities, public ownership of all railroads, opposition to the sales tax, larger veterans' payments and immediate payment of the bonus, and a referendum before declaration of war except in case of actual invasion.

Clark Now Out For Judgeship In Fifth Circuit

Former Representative Withdraws From Senatorial Race.

Annapolis, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Former Representative Lynwood L. Clark, Republican, formerly of the Second Maryland District, today withdrew from the State-wide, four-cornered Senatorial contest, and filed for the Republican nomination of associate judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit.

He will oppose Roscoe C. Rowe, city counselor of Annapolis, who filed several days ago.

On the Democratic side there also are two candidates—Judge Nicholas H. Green, appointed less than two years ago, who seeks the full term of 15 years, and Eugene P. Childs, of Annapolis.

For a time Mr. Clark was somewhat vexed as to whether he would be eligible for the judgeship, the question having been raised as to his legal residence.

Formerly of Baltimore County, he has maintained his home at Hern Point, Eastport, and has diverted his interest to local affairs, although his name did not appear on local registration books. His certificate was withheld, pending a favorable ruling from the State's legal department.

Fight Now Three-Cornered.

The withdrawal of Mr. Clark leaves the Republican Senatorial battle to former Senator Joseph Irwin France, former Representative John Phillip Hill, Third Maryland District, and C. Wilbur Miller, chairman of the Republican central committee for Baltimore County.

There was a rush among local candidates today to file, and additional interest was injected into the campaign by the announcement from the Better Government League of a group of candidates it has indorsed, and whose names will appear on the general election ballots in November by petition.

For several months the league, formed on a nonpartisan basis, has been combing the field for those regarded as the best qualified candidates for the more important offices, regardless of party affiliations, in order to put the standards of county government on a higher plane.

Some of the candidates indorsed by the league already have filed for the primary contest. Those indorsed are:

State attorney, Roscoe C. Rowe, Republican, Annapolis, who has filed for judge. Sheriff, Joseph S. Dean, Democrat, Annapolis, who has filed.

Candidates Certified.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner 3d certified to county election boards and supervisors of elections of Baltimore City the names of State-wide candidates in the primaries.

For Governor on the Republican ticket three names appear—United States Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Harry W. Nice and H. Webster Smith. On the Democratic ticket are Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and Dr. Charles H. Conley.

Candidates for Congress and for places on county tickets have until August 22 to file for the primary. Those seeking election to Congress must file with the secretary of state, while those seeking county office must file at their local courthouses.

There has been considerable speculation here regarding the eleventh-hour filing of William Milnes Maloy, Baltimore attorney, for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate. Mr. Maloy, who ran against Gov. Ritchie for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1926 and was defeated by a substantial majority, is a former State senator, former chairman of the Public Service Commission and former People's Counsel.

His papers were filed last Saturday, only a few hours before official closing of the lists. He will oppose George L. Radcliffe, protege of United States Senator Millard E. Tydings, for the Democratic Senatorial nomination.

At first it generally was believed Mr. Maloy's entry was inspired by anti-Ritchie and anti-Radcliffe leaders, and one rumor was that the Curran-Ennis faction, which never has been enthusiastic for Ritchie, might have been backing him.

Later, Mr. Maloy declared he was in the race "on his own," and had not solicited or received the support of any party leaders. It was under much the same circumstances that he challenged the Ritchie domination of the party in 1926; he made a single-handed fight for the nomination all over the State, and, although defeated, nevertheless he revealed the existence of a relatively strong anti-Ritchie sentiment.

New candidates who filed today are: House of Delegates—Democrats, William H. Labrot, Third District; Wilbur R. Dulin, Second District; Republicans, Leroy T. Mankin, Fourth District; Allen C. K. Clark, Fifth District.

Register of wills—W. Meade Holloday, Democrat, Annapolis.

County treasurer—C. Albert Hodges, Democrat, Annapolis (incumbent); Joseph H. Pepper, Republican, Third District.

Sheriff—Republicans, Joseph W. Alton, Second District; John Bowie, Fourth District; Ernest J. Ford, Sixth District; Carl N. Shipley, Fifth District.

Manassas Man Heads Potomac Baptist Group

L. Ledman Named Moderator at Leesburg Meeting of Association.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 16 (Spl.).—L. Ledman, prominent Baptist of Manassas, was elected moderator of the Potomac Baptist Association at the closing session of the seventy-ninth annual meeting at the Mount Hope Baptist Church, near Leesburg, today.

Other officers elected are the Rev. P. S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Alexandria, vice moderator; the Rev. C. Wirt Trainham, of Marshall, secretary; James Rollison, of Alexandria, assistant secretary, and Harris Fields, of Halfway, treasurer.

The principal address today was made by the Rev. L. M. Ritter, of Bowling Green, Va., who spoke on State missions and urged the people to contribute more liberally and increase the work of the missions throughout the State, which is entering its hundredth year of service.

The doctrinal sermon of the two-day session was delivered by the Rev. Marshall Frazer, of Marshall, Va. A highlight of the meeting was the report by Mrs. J. C. Rogers, superintendent of the Potomac Women's Missionary Society, on mission work.

All churches in the association, which embraces the counties of Loudoun, Fauquier, Fairfax, Arlington, Culpeper, Rappahannock and the City of Alexandria, were represented at the meeting.

Gordon Wins Support of Organization

Former St. John's Head Seeks Democratic Senate Post.

Baltimore, Aug. 16 (Spl.—Douglas Huntly Gordon, former president of St. John's College at Annapolis, who is running for the Democratic nomination for the State Senate from the Second Legislative District of Baltimore, has been indorsed by the Democratic organization in that district, it was reported today.

Mr. Gordon is opposed by John G. Callan, former member of the House of Delegates and leader of the fight several years ago to rid Baltimore of its ancient blue laws.

Several years ago Mr. Gordon was a member of the House of Delegates and led opposition to the civil marriage bill, which would have given magistrates and mayors the right to perform wedding ceremonies. The bill was defeated.

At present, only clergymen have that right. Mr. Gordon also opposed the plan to establish a State lottery as a means of raising unemployment relief funds.

Three File in Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Three additional candidates for county and State offices filed yesterday.

They are Samuel C. Kaylor, Republican, for sheriff; Robert J. Vickers, Tilghmanton, Republican, for the House of Delegates, and William C. Maugans, Democrat, for county commissioner.

Hurry Files to Succeed Self.

Leonardtown, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—J. Donald Hurry, sr., of Clements, has filed for chairman of the Republican State central committee to succeed himself.

Louis Nathanson Merchant, of Leonardtown, has withdrawn from nomination on the Democratic ticket as a member of the Democratic State central committee and announced as candidate for delegate to the State convention to select the next Governor.

Full G. O. P. Ticket Forecast.

Chestertown, Aug. 16.—Following a meeting here yesterday afternoon in the Lyceum Theater, District leaders of the Republican party in Kent County are believed ready to name a full ticket to oppose the "harmony" candidates of the Democrats.

The parley, presided over by Olia Davis of Galena, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, was attended by leaders from all county districts and precincts. It is reported former Postmaster John N. Bennett may run for sheriff. The Democrats have eight candidates for that office.

G. O. P. to Fight Hard For 8th District Seat

Green Counts on Criticism of Judge Smith's 100 Per Cent Adherence to New Deal to Help Him in Congress Race.

By C. B. Carr.

Alexandria, Va., Aug. 16.—Numerous elements tending to disturb the peace and calm predicted for the Democrats during the coming election in the Eighth district have arisen with the result that many Democratic leaders admit they believe their candidate for Congress will receive one of the lightest votes in years.

Judge Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, Democrat, is standing for re-election. He is opposed by John Locke Green, Republican, of Clarendon.

Throughout the district there appears widespread criticism of Judge Smith's support of the New Deal measures. Such criticism, it appears, is a result of the divergent interests in the section, many of which Judge Smith disregarded when he followed 100 per cent the leads of the Roosevelt Administration.

It is pointed out that Judge Smith not only voted for the Roosevelt economy bill, which curtailed the compensation paid to disabled veterans, but he opposed cash payment of the bonus.

Dissatisfaction Claimed.

A prominent Democratic politician said he did not believe there could be any more disappointed office-seekers in any other Virginia district than in the Eighth. He pointed out that in numerous instances dissatisfaction over the appointment of postmasters has been rife.

Arlington and Fairfax Counties are composed largely of employes in Washington. Under the economy bill they had their salaries cut.

In the 1933 gubernatorial campaign, W. Worth Smith, a brother of Judge Smith, was a candidate for the Democratic nomination. George C. Peery was the organization candidate. Despite rumors that Mr. Smith might withdraw at his brother's request, he remained in the race and ran a poor third. Some members of the Democratic organization point out that Judge Smith campaigned for his brother. Judge Smith had been regarded as an organization man, but support of his brother is said to have weaned him from the organization wing and as a result old-line Democratic politicians may leave him to fight his own battles alone this year.

Judge Smith's opponent is one of the younger and militant members of the Republican party. Green is said to have a record as a fighter. He was one of the party leaders taking the stand at the recent executive committee meeting in Roanoke.

Opposed to the principles of the New Deal, Green has summed up his platform in the following words:

"I am for maintaining the Constitution of the United States, and I am opposed to any and all policies which tend to abrogate and destroy our Constitutional rights, independence and liberty. If I become a member of Congress, I will vote against these communistic policies of the New Deal which are destroying our rights and the Constitution, and which are plunging the country head over heels in debt."

Change In Attitude Seen.

Green declares he senses a change of attitude on the part of the voters toward the New Deal. He points out that in 1928, Hoover carried the Eighth District by about 13,000. In 1932, the district gave Roosevelt about the same majority, which indicates, he contends, that there is a large "floater" vote which, when not satisfied with existing conditions, will quickly vote for the other side. He adds that the majority of the voters are not satisfied with existing conditions.

A vigorous campaign is planned by Green, starting with an address at Manassas the first week in September.

For a decade Republican politicians have claimed the Eighth District was leaning more all the time toward their party. This year, however, they have a new problem in the form of a remapped district. In the Virginia redistricting act of 1934, the Legislature added five counties and the city of Charlottesville to the district. These counties—Madison, Albemarle, Greene, Fluvanna and Goochland—are regarded as strongly Democratic. Other constituencies of the district include Alexandria and the Counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun, Prince William, Fauquier, Stafford, King George, Culpeper, Orange and Louisa.

Former Virginia Slave, 119 Years Of Age, Is Buried

Cleveland, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—They buried Ned Morgan today, as simply and as inconspicuously as he had lived for 119 years.

A plain pine box containing the body of the aged colored man was lowered, without ritual, into a grave in Potters Field.

Ned's "baby daughter," Mrs. Elizabeth Reddick, 64, brought him to Cleveland 11 years ago. He was eight years past the century mark then, and had outlived five wives, six children, two grandchildren, three great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild — the latter by 14 years.

Morgan was born on a plantation near Richmond, Va., in 1815, the property of a slave-owner named Cobb. When nine years old he was sold to another slave-owner named Morgan, and took the latter's name.

Old as he was, Morgan survived two automobile accidents and two strokes of apoplexy. The third stroke killed him.

Federal Camp Revolt Leader Gets Jail Term

Transient Sentenced to 18 Months for Uprising in Maryland.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 16 (Spl.). William McClelland, of New York, leader of an uprising in a Federal transient camp at Pearre, in western Washington County, today was given 18 months in the House of Correction by Magistrate Ross Fite, Hancock.

McClelland was charged with assaulting M. H. Dauploise, former sea captain, in charge of the camp, while six alleged accomplices were ordered out and told not to return.

The sheriff's office received word early today there had been a mutiny in the camp and that its supervisor had been driven away after being attacked.

Deputy Sheriff Edgar Brandt found most of the men in their tents and McClelland lying in a box car. Dauploise told of the attack, but refused to prosecute the six named as participants. Authorities learned there had been drinking prior to the attack.

Most of the 60 men stationed at the camp told officers they had no complaints, and were satisfied with food and conditions.

Ice Cream Prices Increased.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16 (Spl.). Owing to the increased cost of labor and materials, five local ice cream plants have announced increased prices.

Need of Parent Education Told FERA Institute

Group at Training School Hear Community Life Problem Aired.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 16.—Authorities on parent education and child nursery schools today lectured on problems of community life to emergency educational supervisors and teachers attending the FERA training institute at the University of Virginia.

Telling of the need of parent education, one of the projects included in the FERA educational program, Dr. Muriel W. Brown, of the educational division of the FERA, defined this phase of adule teaching as the development of "a process of self-education, by virtue of which parents grow in their understanding of themselves, their children and their family life."

In the open forum conference, teachers and social workers representing Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia discussed their community problems with round-table leaders.

Educational work being carried on among parents in Georgia was described by Martha McAlpine, of the Georgia Department of Education.

The development of nursery schools was outlined by Dr. Harold H. Anderson, FERA educational representative and vice president of the National Association for Nursery Education.

He told of the work carried on last year in 2,300 emergency nursery schools in 38 States, in which 50,000 children were enrolled. In cooperation with the FERA, Dr. Anderson said every State was resuming the work this year, with several new ones coming in.

"Nursery education," he declared, "is now available only for the very rich and the very poor. The future is going to show whether society cares sufficiently for the welfare of the child to offer the benefits of nursery education to all children of preschool years."

The importance of providing play activities for young children in the child health stations was described by Dr. Lois Hayden Meek, of the child development institute of Columbia University.

Valley Firemen End Conclave With Parade

8 Bands, 4 Drum Corps Take Part in Rally at Waynesboro.

By W. H. Shryock.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 16.—Delayed by rain for two hours, Cumberland Valley firemen concluded the association's thirty-third annual meeting here this afternoon with a parade that required half an hour to pass a given point.

The parade started shortly after 5 p. m. Eight bands and four drum corps accompanied fire companies from as far north as Newport, Pa., east to Frederick, Md., west to Westernport, Md., and south to Winchester, Va. Fourteen pieces of fire-fighting equipment and two ambulances were included.

A band contest concluded the convention at 8 p. m. Companies represented in the parade were:

Most of the companies had at least one piece of apparatus, a band or drum corps. Charles Town, W. Va., sent a fire truck.

State and local police led the procession, followed by association officials.

M. M. Tawney, Harrisburg, newly elected chief, returned for the parade after traveling several hundred miles, in the interest of firemen over Pennsylvania since his election Tuesday.

Lowenkeller's Solo-Singing Waiter Takes a Fling at Opera; Altitude Seekers Going to Blue Ridge Tea House.

By Kay Ware.

Bright lights and music—it's an old recipe for a good time, but it's served with new frills in Washington. Fifty-seven varieties are waiting; you count your money; you take your choice.

In spite of the present overdose of showers, it's always fair weather where the orchestra plays and the ice clinks.

There's a little card on your table at the Loewenkeller. The legend reads, "A sparkling enemy of thirst flavored with fresh lemon and smooth as a movie queen's cheek." It sounds suspiciously like one of Happy Walker's wise cracks.

During dinner hour, and later, the solo-singing waiter will produce very good grand opera, gestures and all. If the knee trousers look out of place in "Pagliacci" nobody cares.

Have you seen Arthur Godfrey in his blue-green coat? It's really a luscious color and just matches his eyes. Perhaps he will set a style. The coat is gathered at the shoulders across the back, a detail seldom seen.

Arthur hops over to a local theater next week, where he will add a little more fame to his name. Now he presides at Club Michel. Girls who have a weakness for auburn hair and faint freckles should make his acquaintance.

Washingtonians who crave higher altitudes are taking a drive over to the Twin Oaks Tea House, perched 1,500 feet above sea level, on the summit of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Tea, dinner or what-not may be had on the big rustic veranda, which commands a wide view of the Shenandoah Valley. The latest scheme is to take the family and stay all night, and return buoyed up with more rarefied air.

The route is straight out of Washington on the Leesburg road, and then take the road to Berryville, via Paeonian Springs, Round Hill, Bluemont and Snicker's Gap of Civil War fame. At the summit on the line between Virginia and West Virginia is Twin Oaks.

Horse, Dog Or Doe?

The sculpture on top of the Carlton's bar might start an argument. It looks vaguely like a prehistoric horse which hasn't reached its growth. On the other hand, it might be a modification of a dog, or a slim little doe. The management decides in favor of the dog. Drop up and take a good look at it yourself.

The golden mirrors are all very well, but they don't make you look any too healthy. If you don't try to find your reflection in them, the effect is beautiful. Particularly artistic is the bunch of coral-colored gladioli in front of one of the mirrors. If they haven't changed the floral decoration by this time, the brilliant color effect is still there now.

Nice to mix art with cocktails, isn't it?

Have you seen—

The man on Fourteenth street who sells words to popular songs and yells his wares out of the corner of his mouth? . . . The Indian braves who ran down to give three grains of corn to the President? . . . The messenger boys strolling around in the downpours as if nothing was happening? . . .

The half dozen little clocks in a shop on E street whose pendulums move incessantly? . . . The Chinese shop on the same street where you can get back-scratchers, embroidered kimonas, slippers and knick-knacks? . . . The store near the Veterans' Bureau where they sell artificial "limbs?" . . .

Puck, the statue in front of the Folger Library? . . . The electric drill that sounds like a thirsty cow? . . . The jet chokers still worn by local dowagers? . . . The bishop's garden at the Cathedral? . . . All the boarded-up mansions and embassies on Massachusetts avenue? Everybody's on a vacation. . . .

The taxi-driver whose wife, May, had triplets? He named the babies April, May and June.

More of "The Drunkard." The Roadside Players are putting it on this week, at their theater. As at the Willard, the drama will be filigreed with olio features in true Barnum style.

Last call for Pierce Mill Tea Room. On the first of September the tea room will give place to a restoration of the old mill, by the Government, as a sort of museum piece of American history. It seems too bad, in these economical times, to spend a lot of money to make something a few people look at, and take away a place that is making money to the happiness of all concerned.

If you missed "The Drunkard" Tuesday night at the Willard, make a date for Saturday and don't miss it! You'll roll in your chair with laughter, hiss the villain, cheer lustily when "all is well." It's a rare delight, after the sophistication of most entertainment.

The Tavern Club adjoining is an ideal place for the old-time atmosphere. Bills and placards, programs, and "give so-and-so for Governor" hang around.

Look for the sign of the shell. It might be a cockle, it isn't a clam, snails never manufactured one like it, but it's an identifying feature of the Mayflower Lounge. The lounge used to be the Palm Court, but because it was so chilly in atmosphere the management utilized the space to better advantage.

A happy thought. The cocktail glasses are so constructed that the olive or cherry rolls down into your mouth without coaxing. Most of the time economical sippers have to dig them out with their fingers, which is a nuisance.

Pool Still Popular.

In spite of the cool weather, the pool at Maryland Club Gardens is still splashing with large crowds. As people return from vacations, they are sure to want a bridge party there. A popular nook for the younger set, too, and Mrs. Bowen, the hostess, arranges things admirably.

The little dancer, Mary Ellers, is billed this week; also Lee and Cody, who have been featured at the Hangar Club.

Speaking of the Hangar Club, Bill Levy wants to turn the place into a sort of conservatory. Glass roof and that sort of thing. There's no telling what he'll think of next.

Howard Pyles furnishes very good music, but sometimes he has competition. Whenever an airplane soars up or down, all the dancers stop, lean over the rail and watch. The music might be merry enough, but those planes can't be missed.

For tea for two, try the Venezia, near Dupont Circle. The walls are scenic, representative of Italy's best effects, stars are on the ceiling, tables and chairs are metal and light.

It's cool and comfortable, and enormously convenient.

On the seventh floor of Woodward & Lothrop's there is a tea room. Adjoining it is a room darkly paneled in wood; candles are lit and luncheon is served. Either spot is ideal if you're looking for good food, excellent service and dignified atmosphere.

For the gentlemen—If you're wary of the "tea room" title, be assured that plenty of your sex go there for business luncheon.

For the ladies—Your Paris hat will be more becoming in candlelight. Also, wood panels lend a romantic touch.

With the revival of memories going on these days, the colonial room of the Colonial Hotel will give you things to remember. Jeffersonian atmosphere is the theme of the place; the clock turns back, and you look for periwigs and ruffles.

For cocktails, luncheon, coffee shop specialties and what not.

August is sea nettle season, as all bathers know—but for the benefit of the uninformed, sea nettles are a particularly ill-tempered kind of jelly fish. When they sting, they leave a red mark for a souvenir.

All of which warning goes to point out that the beaches that are netted against sea nettles, such as Beverly Beach, are drawing contented bathers. Beverly Beach is only a 40-minute run over to the bay, and the water is salted regularly.

Today's Mottoes.

It's a great life if you don't week-end.

It's never too late to mend.

Straw hats tell which way the wind blows.

Too many cooks spoil the budget.

Be wise, sweet maid, and let who will be careless.

A new broom sweeps well; you couldn't expect it to do the dusting.

Look before you elope.

If it stops raining long enough, Chevy Chase Lake is something more than a puddle. The management is probably ready for snow or sleet by this time, after the regularity with which the heavens have been opening.

But for really smooth music and smoother breezes, cooling beer and pretzels, this spot is hard to beat.

Sketched on the Thumbnail.

Miss Porter, partner of Albert de Lima, at the Shoreham this week, is something of a dress designer. Has all her costumes made according to her orders, and her orders are good ones. Wait until you see her in the red satin gown as she dances the satirical Carioca.

Prevailing fashions have nothing to do with style, she believes. A woman should dress to suit her personality.

Has been with the Cincinnati Opera Company as prima ballerina, and Russian Opera Company in New York.

Latin type, born in Pennsylvania.

Mr. De Lima is a politician, in spite of being a dancer. Founded (or helped to found) "Apra," political party in Peru. Expects to return to politics if the "Apra's" candidate is elected in July. His brother is Peruvian Minister to Italy; another is Peruvian Consul at Bremen.

Theft in Chicago Laid To "Woman in Red"

Chicago, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—The mysterious "woman in red" of the John Dillinger slaying was named today in a warrant charging larceny. Simultaneously fresh mystery developed as to the whereabouts of the woman.

The warrant was issued at the request of Holger M. Borglum, 45. He charged that Mrs. Anna Sage, the "woman in red," who accompanied John Dillinger to the Biograph Theater the night he was ambushed by officers, stole $800 from his apartment.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Maybe Blackie Is Dead!

Of course, Jay Bird was over at Aunt Lindy's when Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy got there on Sunday morning and he heard all that Uncle Joe and the others had to say about that "strange animal" and his curious tracks. It is a fact that he had never seen any such tracks before Blackie came to the Creek country, but he knew well enough that Blackie couldn't make them and he couldn't see a single bear track mixed up with them. The truth is that Jocko scratched out every one of Blackie's tracks and so there was no way of telling that anybody but Jocko or the "strange animal" had been there.

When Jay Bird got back to Blackie's house and told them there was a "strange animal" somewhere in the crowd, of course they all knew it was Jocko, and Billie Possum had to grin and say, "Hello, stranger." Jocko said that he wanted to keep right on being a stranger to Uncle Joe and Mr. Man and all the rest of their crowd, as he already knew plenty of people around the Creek to keep him company, and as long as they didn't know what sort of an animal made the tracks, they wouldn't know what sort of animal to hunt for.

But let's get back to Aunt Lindy's house. After she had let the pan of biscuits burn up, and had cooked another lot, she got her dinner on the table. Because somebody else had her old ham for his dinner, she had to cook one of her fresh ones, but that suited Uncle Joe and Aunt Lindy mighty well, for they hadn't killed any hogs yet, and they ate a lot of the pork, but all the time they were eating new ham they were talking about old ham. Again and again they asked who in the world could come over there at night and catch Hound Dog and tie him up that way, without making any noise, and then go and get that ham and carry it away, and still leave nothing but "strange animal" tracks!

They had always laid every bit of mischief to Blackie Bear, but no bear in the world could do a thing like that. Some mighty smart rogue had made himself some curious shoes to wear when he went to rob folks, and now they would have to hunt for him, just as they had hunted for Blackie Bear. And maybe there was no Blackie Bear, anyway, for everybody believed Blackie had been killed a long time ago. What if some rogue of a man had begun to do all of these things after Blackie was killed and thought that all of his robberies would be charged to Blackie! That is what Uncle Joe was saying at dinner, and the more they talked about it, the more they all believed it.

There was one thing certain: No animal could have tied that dog up, and if no animal could have done it, then some man did it. And that was all there was to it, so Uncle Joe said. And then when he thought about the way his black calf butted him into the fig bush that night, he felt more and more sure that Blackie had been killed, and that some man was doing the things that he thought would be charged to Blackie.

Who got Mr. Man's turnovers? A man, certainly. Who drove Hee-Haw off and kept him for ever so long? A man, of course. No wonder the dogs could never find a bear. And Uncle Joe went home that afternoon feeling mighty well pleased with himself for finding out that Blackie Bear was dead.

Jon Lindbergh 2; Nurse Parents Not at Home

North Haven, Me., Aug. 16 (AP).—Little Jon Morrow Lindbergh passed his second birthday anniversary today in the secluded and guarded surroundings of the Morrow summer estate, but his parents and Betty Gow, his nurse, were not there. It was disclosed that Miss Gow recently returned to her native Scotland on a vacation. She also was nurse for the kidnaped and slain Charles Lindbergh, jr.

Although no details of Jon's birthday party were made known it was believed he passed the day as most youngsters of 2 years—oblivious to time.

Mooney Demonstration For Farley Is Banned

Plans had been made by a group of liberals for a parade in the interest of a pardon for Mooney, who is serving a life sentence in California for the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco.

'93 World's Fair Bard Dies During New Exhibit

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—At the last World's Fair in '93 crowds went away from the Midway humming a song tried out there by a Dutch comedian—"After the Ball."

Today funeral services were held for Knox Wilson, 65, who popularized Charles Harris' ballad, still one of the country's best-known songs.

MY DOG STORY

The Post invites its readers to send in their favorite dog stories, accompanied, if possible, by a photograph. The stories should be true ones, and not more than 250 words in length. A weekly prize of $10 will be paid for the best contribution.

By Marjorie A. Weaver,

Bob was not a pedigreed dog. He was just a dog of the common species. He lived on a farm in the mountains where I often spend my vacation.

One day his master brought a wee lamb to the house. Bob, though fond of the family cat, would not make friends with the lamb, but apparently took an interest in everything that was done for it.

After the lamb had been at the house for about five weeks, Bob thought it was time to return it to its kin. So, one morning he was observed leaving the yard with the lamb following him. He took a short cut to the pasture, going via the meadow, and left the lamb with the other sheep, returning the same way.

From his actions he was happy to have helped an unfortunate. But his happiness was of short duration. That afternoon the lamb came back. Bob went into seclusion. For three days he laid with his eyes closed, refusing to eat. In the late afternoon of the third day, he came out of the dog house and partook of food. Then he thought he would try again to return the lamb to the fold.

This time he took a longer route over the mountain, crossing a stream of water to reach the pasture. He left the lamb as before, but did not return the way he came. Believe it or not, he went a long distance around the mountain in the opposite direction. The lamb never came back. Bob had solved his problem.

The new flower bed was our proudest possession. Tenderly we had set out each little plant. Shane, our Irish terrier, watched us with great interest as we puttered about. He realized right off that this flower bed was practically sacred ground. Whenever he romped or chased his rubber ball, he gingerly avoided the bed and treated it with careful respect at all times.

There is a vacant lawn next door where the neighborhood dogs congregate each morning for a frolic. Shane joins them gularly. But one morning before we turned him out the dog convention took up their meeting on our own lawn and several of the dogs chose the cool watered soil of the flower bed in which to rest. I opened the door and shouted at them, but Shane had already taken charge. With a fierce growl and an exasperated yelp, he charged on his playmates. The offenders did not mistake the meaning. Big and little the canine clique fled in terror before the wrath of this storming red terrier.

Later he joined them at the usual meeting place to play, as always, in the best of spirits. But he continues to police his own lawn around the precious flower bed and no dog has since ventured beyond the border of iris around our property.

Departure From Haiti.

"Comprehension must be the soil in which shall grow all the fruits of friendship." Those words were spoken by Woodrow Wilson in a speech delivered in 1913 and they were the text of another speech, repudiating armed intervention in Latin America, which Franklin D. Roosevelt gave here on the War President's birthday last December. They are recalled as the last of the Marines sails from Haiti, in the words of the Associated Press, amid "military solemnity and civilian enthusiasm."

The evacuation of this little republic is a constructive affirmation of the policy behind Mr. Wilson's words. With full comprehension of the problem the Administration has decided that the Haitians are capable of self-rule, that foreign policing of the once turbulent island is no longer necessary. The Marines have been in Haiti nearly 20 years. During that time, Secretary Hull points out, they have "rendered invaluable, disinterested service" to the Haitian government and people. "At this moment," he added, "they are withdrawing from the island in an atmosphere of great friendliness and the best of understanding."

The agreement for evacuation was reached a year ago. The Marines were to be out of the island by next October. But early last month President Roosevelt and President Vincent came to an agreement to hasten the departure. By this small, but friendly, concession Mr. Roosevelt emphasized the sincerity of a "good neighbor" policy which is unquestionably serving to diminish suspicion and increase the prestige of the United States in Latin America.

As the last of the Marines sailed from Port-au-Prince, a detachment of their airplanes reached Washington from the island. This was a good-will flight worthy of the name. Now it is up to Haiti, republic of chaotic history, to prove that the confidence placed in her future by this country is not misplaced.

Jim Hawkins.

It is worthy of note that the three boyhood characters which appeal most strongly to the imagination of their peers were created a half century ago, one quickly following another, and that not one approaching in any degree the charm of these three has appeared on the pages of fiction since that time.

"Tom Sawyer" was the first of the memorable trio. Mark Twain made him flesh and blood in 1876. In 1883 "Jim Hawkins" came to life as the hero of Robert Louis Stevenson's masterpiece, "Treasure Island." Two years later Mark Twain again rang the bell with his lovable rapscallion whose deeds are chronicled in "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn."

Last year The Post nominated a newsboy to pose for an oil painting as "Huckleberry Finn;" and pictures reproduced from the painting appeared on Post calendars for 1934. This year a painting will be made of a newsboy who will pose as "Jim Hawkins." The carriers themselves have decided on which of their number are most eligible as contestants for the honor.

That is as well, for prosaic adults need the guidance of youth to visualize Stevenson's young hero, who overheard the mutineers' plot from the apple barrel; who put to sea in a tiny coracle; who boarded the ship which had been captured by the pirates; who overpowered the deck watch; who—in short—generally frustrated the hard-boiled followers of Capt. Flint. But in spite of the varied accomplishments of the original we have no doubt that there is an ideal Jim Hawkins among our carriers.

Form Follows Function.

Raymond Hood's genius was encompassed in a period of about ten years, a decade which saw much building in this country and which saw skylines everywhere vastly changed. When he won the Chicago Tribune Tower award the modernists were aghast at his Gothic conception of a structure to house "the world's greatest newspaper." The expression "form follows function" had not then become the fetish it was when, in 1931, he reared his plain but magnificent McGraw Hill Building in New York. The history of the pre-depression decade may, to a certain extent, be traced through the evolution of Raymond Hood.

There was much that was atrocious, much that was agreeable, a little that was great. It is too early to pass final judgment over what, in 1924, was widely hailed as a magnificent architectural triumph, the black and gold-tipped American Radiator Building, overlooking New York's Bryant Park. It has been dwarfed, it is true, by some of its neighbors, most of whom shine brightly. But when its original surroundings, its purpose and its treatment are all taken into consideration it will seem to many that Raymond Hood built something permanent into the history of our architecture.

But the severe critic will look beyond the gloom and gilt to the straight lines, the clean-cut contours of the McGraw-Hill Building. This is the supreme example of Raymond Hood's genius. Here form does follow function and it was builded for a modern age of glass and steel. It is a machine-age building and as such it is as beautiful as anything we possess, because it is so obviously useful. It is, as all buildings really are, a tool used by man in his daily rounds. There is nothing deceptive, in idea or execution.

We say this of his buildings, but we do so in the face of a greater critic, who is Time. If any of the architectural concepts of the Boom Age were right, as we so stubbornly insist they were—thinking mostly of the horrors they supplanted—then Raymond Hood's name will endure. And that is more than can be said of most architects, whose minds are Victorian and whose drawing pens are guided by smug and meretricious ideas of the relationship between beauty and utility.

The Food Price Problem.

In the long run, where monopoly is under control, supply and demand determine the prices paid for goods. But over short periods the organized speculative markets offer opportunities for price manipulation that may prove to be most undesirable from any social viewpoint. It is this sort of manipulation against which the Administration has declared war to prevent unwarranted advances in food prices.

It would be specious to argue that efforts to curb profiteering are inconsistent with the price-raising policies to which the Administration is committed. There is a profound difference between an advance obtained by systematic curtailment of output and a price rise that results from a natural disaster.

The crop-control program of the AAA has greatly aggravated the difficulties resulting from catastrophic crop failure. But it is nevertheless evident that drought-produced scarcity is quite different in character from that caused by voluntary restriction of output. The drought has created local shortages of necessary foodstuffs, offering opportunities to unscrupulous men to engage in petty profiteering. Furthermore, spectacular crop failures cause people to exaggerate the extent of the Nation-wide loss and create conditions favorable to widespread speculation in basic necessities.

Under such circumstances it is incumbent upon the Administration to use all the means at its disposal to combat efforts to exploit a great National calamity. That does not mean that attempts should be made to prevent prices from rising when shortages exist. To do so it would be necessary to resort to a species of price fixing of very far-reaching, and by no means certainly desirable, consequences. The difficulties encountered in efforts to establish so-called "fair" prices in code agreements suggest how necessary it is to proceed cautiously here. Only those who are obviously exacting excessive prices, or engaging in manipulative operations on the organized commodity exchanges, are proper subjects for discipline.

During the past year, there has been a considerable rise in living costs, due largely to advances in raw-material prices and in wages. Increases of this sort have been unavoidable, although they have not been entirely welcome to an Administration that has undertaken to raise farm prices without a corresponding advance in prices of other commodities. In view of the desire to maintain farm prices at a relatively high figure, and to keep living costs as low as possible, there is some danger that the middleman might be placed between two millstones.

To do justice to all classes of producers and distributors, therefore, a clear distinction must be made between price increases that reflect higher actual labor and material costs and those that result from excessive profits. The former are the logical outcome of the price-raising policies that the Administration has sanctioned. The latter are unwelcome results of a drought that has upset the plans of the AAA. In so doing it has given rise to troublesome price-control problems of an entirely new character.

Governor Black Resigns.

In the spring of 1933, Eugene R. Black was called upon at short notice to accept appointment as Governor of the Federal Reserve Board. He did so at a considerable personal sacrifice, upon the understanding that the position would be temporary, as he planned to return to his duties as head of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank. Since then he has attempted to withdraw upon several occasions, but each time has been induced to reconsider. Acceptance of his resignation at this time, therefore, is in no sense surprising.

It is more surprising, perhaps, that Governor Black has held office so long, since it is generally believed that he is not in sympathy with the currency policies approved by the Administration. But he has voiced no open expressions of dissent, and when decisions have been taken he has cooperated whole-heartedly in efforts to make them effective. Under such conditions, Governor Black's reputation as an upholder of orthodox monetary policies has made him a particularly valuable ally of an Administration committed to unorthodox monetary experiments.

In appointing Governor Black to act as a liaison officer between the Administration and the banks of the country, President Roosevelt has given him a rather vague mandate. His services as an intermediary should be of value, however, if they result in emphasizing the bankers' problems to the Administration as well as the Administration's desires to the bankers.

It would seem that these duties would properly devolve upon Governor Black's successor in office, and the other members of the Federal Reserve Board. The character and extent of member bank cooperation would ordinarily be conditioned by the policies adopted by the Federal Reserve authorities, if they were in fact, as in name, independent and responsible agencies entrusted with the task of credit control.

The fact that a liaison officer is appointed to explain to the banks what the Administration proposes to do, and to suggest the lines along which cooperation should proceed, is therefore a development of some significance. It is perhaps another way of saying that the Federal Reserve System is now officially regarded as a subordinate agency for giving effect to policies dictated by the financing exigencies of the recovery program.

Not A One Man Job.

Gen. Johnson admits that the time has come for a reorganization of the NRA, as the work of code administration is "no longer a one-man job." Obviously no single individual "can keep in touch with the details of all that's going on in the many industries." That, of course, is a self-evident truth, long apparent to all close students of this gigantic enterprise.

Probably it never has been necessary for the head of the NRA to have an intimate knowledge of the codes under which hundreds of industries are operating. The fact that his alleged ignorance of what is happening "in the women's hat code" is cited as evidence of need for reorganization, tends to show that Gen. Johnson is not accustomed to delegate authority. In the early days of the recovery administration, when codes were few and decisions important as precedents, executive attention to detail was undoubtedly required. That period, however, is over. The work of administration would probably have proceeded with less friction if the General had earlier been willing to share responsibility more freely.

The substitution of a control board for a single head is desirable not so much because of the multiplicity of details connected with code organization, but rather because of the gravity and complexity of the policy problems that arise in interpreting and applying the law. It is these policy decisions that Gen. Johnson proposes to turn over to a board. He recommends concentrating control over administration in the hands of a single executive officer.

The General himself has not only dictated policies, but has also enforced them. He has been exercising powers over industry that are too great to be safely vested in one individual, no matter how able and energetic. As a temporary expedient, during a period of emergency, there was much to be said in favor of making the management of the NRA a one man job. But as the organization becomes more permanent in character, responsibility should be shared, and administrative, legislative and judicial functions should be carefully separated.

Russian Gold Boom.

Russia is experiencing a gold boom. The present production of the Soviet gold industry is double that of czarist times and is expanding rapidly. As a result Russia has attained second place among world gold producers. New deposits are constantly being discovered and every encouragement is given to the rapid exploitation and development of the industry. It is officially stated, moreover, that the Soviet Union possesses the largest gold reserves of any country and may in the not distant future overtake the output of the Transvaal fields.

It may seem strange that a Communist State that requires no gold in domestic transactions should be so eager to expand its gold mining industry. However, gold is extraordinarily useful as a means of paying for necessary imports. A poor country like Russia, compelled to sell goods abroad as a means of paying for what is bought, finds it much easier to part with gold than to export commodities that could be used within the country to advantage.

If capitalist countries that have abandoned the gold standard continue to accept gold as eagerly as heretofore, Russia will doubtless do her best to provide them with a metal which they place in useless hoards in exchange for goods that the Russian people can eat, wear or otherwise enjoy.

Big League Stuff.

For at least 15 years Washingtonians have been telling inquiring strangers that the population of this fair city is half a million. As of today, it seems, those assertions become accurate. The Census Bureau officially estimates that 497,000 people inhabited the District of Columbia on July 1—presumably counting as residents those who then had the good fortune to be vacationing elsewhere. And local boosters are quick to point out that at least the odd 3,000 has been made up by additions to the Government pay roll in the past seven weeks.

That assumption is probably fair enough. And forgetting past exaggerations we can now expand our collective chests at the knowledge that we have really attained that "half-million class" which has exerted so impelling a fascination for many once charming American cities. Of course, with this graduation to real manhood we have a troublesome traffic problem, congested streets, high rentals and other considerations. But we need no longer feel ashamed to look citizens of Detroit and Los Angeles in the eye. We're in the half-million class, and that without even counting Maryland and Virginia!

Unlike most cities of mushroom growth, the amenities of Washington have on the whole kept full pace with the addition of noses. And even the most crotchety "cliff-dweller" can scarcely object to the character of the majority of aliens who come to swell our numbers. But for all that we don't want to overestimate the desirability of mere magnitude. There is a not inapplicable moral behind the story of the Englishman who continually stressed the importance of "keeping fit." Some horrid cynic reduced him to confusion by asking: "Keeping fit for what?"

You can fool all of the people some of the time and the remainder of the time they will be disappointed.

A woman's desire for an audience is so great that if she can't get one any other way she'll marry one.

Honesty is the best policy, and like the best of anything else, there's not much of it.

Civil Service Vs. Politicians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial entitled "The Most Important Question" incites the apprehension that the National Economic League may go the way of the National Economy League of unhappy memory. The Economy League also began with a program for "economy and efficiency" in Government, and ended with a slaughter of Government functions and of Government employes, the culmination of a campaign of propaganda in which facts were submerged and prejudice played a consuming part.

It is all very well for well-meaning gentlemen of the National Economic League, or any other organization, to talk in vague terms about economy and efficiency in Government service. But when one comes down to facts, the facts are (1) that the Government is performing certain functions and services, of greater or less utility, and generally at the specific request of certain business or social groups; (2) that it is doing these jobs because they ought to be done, or because the interests concerned want them done and have sufficient influence to get them done, and ordinarily because no other agency is doing them, or can do them properly; (3) that where these functions are entrusted to civil service employes, the work is being done efficiently and cheaply, nine times out of ten.

Every serious student of Governmental problems knows that the waste and extravagance of Governments, National, State or local, are in almost every instance due to politics. Political machines have to support themselves; they do this by creating political jobs, largely ornamental, or by favoring certain interests or groups in the business relationships of the Government. If the attacks by the "economy" shouters were directed at these phases of Governmental activity, they might be productive of some good to the public; but when the attacks constitute mere indiscriminate yapping about Governmental "inefficiency" and "waste," they are as a rule sponsored by propagandists for business interests who are working hand in glove with politicians, and the sufferers are the able, conscientious civil service employes.

The National Economic League might do well to avoid classification with the National Economy League, and to attack the problem of economy and efficiency in Government with more discrimination.

Price-Cutting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is surprising to find the name "Robert Quillen" signed to the very strange article which recently appeared in your paper under the heading, "Samson Can Pull Down the Temple, But Always Perishes."

Who furnished him the information that the "curse of America is price-cutting?" One hundred years of nonprice-cutting, prior to 1890, led to the enactment of the Sherman antitrust law, which has for its underlying principle the dictum that competition is good for business—the seller as well as the buyer—and there can be no competition without price-cutting.

There is no more reason why price should be static than anything else should be static. It is not a fact that production costs in different parts of the country are uniform, nor are costs uniform in the same city. One employer, by superior headwork, can turn out twice as many articles in a given time as his inferior competitor across the street. Why should not the superior headwork be encouraged? Why should not the public get the benefit of such headwork by lower prices?

Strike Up the Band!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I confess amazement at your editorial "No Place for Radicalism?" as published in your issue of August 10—and more amazement at the published letters in your Forum of August 14. Even as I condemn your support of teachings and utterances which are inimical to our Government, I heartily congratulate the American Legion on having such a loyal National commander as Mr. Edward A. Hayes. I indorse every word Mr. Hayes said—radicalism has no place in American institutions—it has no place in America. If the "Silver Shirts" are a group organizing to eradicate radicalism from our social and economic structure, I am for them 100 per cent. He who is not for our Government is against it.

Our best thinking people view the present-day conditions of confusion and irregularity in our National Administration with growing alarm, and they realize that such conditions have been brought about by the un-American ideas taught in many of our schools, and by the foreign element brought to this country for the sole purpose of gaining voting power; establishing a dictatorship and making serfs of free American citizens.

Here is success to you, Mr. Hayes, and to the American Legion as long as it stands for our Constitutional form of Government and the freedom of our citizens. Drive the radicals from our shores and when this is done you will have lessened crime more than 50 per cent.

I am against hyphenated citizens; I am for our Constitution; I am for restricted immigration—I am for America first, last and all the time.

"Orgy of Spending."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The bull stock market of 1929 brought unprecedented prosperity, and people lived lavishly.

When a lot of people begin selling stocks and taking profits as in 1929, naturally the market drops in price. But the people who sold gained a big profit. In 1930 the market would have gone up again if the public had bought shares, and brought about more prosperity. But they refused to buy, and the market drifted lower and lower, and brought about one of our worst depressions, because people refused to buy stocks or anything else they could do without.

This country in normal times does a business of $86,000,000,000 yearly, as compared with $40,000,000,000 at present. So the people must buy more to get back their former business of $86,000,000,000. The farmer did a former business of $16,000,000,000. Now he does a business of $8,000,000,000.

Let us get back to our former prosperity by buying more and living lavishly. Start an orgy of spending, and we will get back our former business without relying on Government expenditure.

Inhabitants.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Through The Post, I wish to thank C. H. W., from Edmonston, Md., for enlightening those who need it, with his quotations from the Constitution and from the beloved Abraham Lincoln.

In fact, if the latter's assertion that "this country belongs to the people who inhabit it" has not been observed scrupulously, it seems that the people as a whole have been guilty of having permitted the Government in the near past to deport many foreign born, who might have very innocently assumed for themselves (as inhabitants of a free country), the prerogatives which Abraham Lincoln has thus plainly declared to belong to "the inhabitants."

Reader Fears Revolutionary Changes Are Near in Industrial System as Result of Continued Display of Unrest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A situation has developed in the United States that is deeply significant, quite disturbing, and which may be indicative of an approaching industrial revolution that will change the entire character and destiny of America.

What is referred to are the number, magnitude and geographical diversity of labor troubles and strikes in industry, attended by more or less violence.

From the beginning of the depression and until recently there were no strikes of consequence, and labor manifested a marvelous and most commendable forbearance under the most trying conditions and great provocations. It is pertinent to inquire why this change of the attitude and action of labor?

It is believed the answer is found in the attitude and policies of the present Administration. Its attitude has been critical and condemnatory of the representatives of the business interests of the country, which, it must be said in fairness, is not without some justification. But, on the other hand, the impression has been created that the Administration is the special friend of labor, and is prepared to back to the limit in all their demands the labor unions of the country.

This apparent hostility of the Administration toward capital has naturally had its psychological effect on labor. The impression has also been created that it is the purpose of the Administration to bring about an equal distribution of the wealth of the country by the exercise of the regulatory and taxing powers of the Federal Government.

The greatness and the unexpectedness of the opportunity have destroyed the perspective and blurred the judgment of the leaders of labor. They have become so eager to realize their Utopian dreams that they can not await with patience the evolution of events to make their dreams come true, but are endeavoring to force events and accelerate the accomplishment of their objects by strikes in every line of industry throughout the country.

No one is more sympathetic with the legitimate aspirations of labor than the writer. He has always believed in the dignity of labor, in its right to unionize and bargain collectively; and that it is entitled to a fairer reward for its contributions to production than it has been heretofore receiving, to more leisure for cultural improvement, and to far better standards of living.

But the writer also believes that capital has rights as well as labor, that both are mutually dependent, and that there should exist between them mutual respect, accord and cooperation for their common interests, instead of antagonism and working at cross purposes.

The Post Impressionist

Still "Red As a Rose."

Postoffice, Friday.

IT is as we hoped—and feared. The Major has read and answered Mrs. Kestler's attack upon his attack upon red finger nails. Also as we—well, at least, feared—he considers it (by and large, but especially large) an attack upon himself.

There is one excellent point, however, to his reply. Among letters for a newspaper concerning any of the thousand things it has published, far too many people begin with their praise or adverse criticism and leave editor and readers wondering, for sentence after sentence, what they are talking about. The Major correctly starts right out by quoting that to which he objects.

"Mrs. Kestler," says he, "writes that I've got 'a sharp eye for danger signals' and says:

"'Imagine any woman of this year being happily incased in a hobble skirt, steel stays, bustle, or wearing a "rat" in her hair! Yet this was the bait used in the Gay Nineties to attract the male of the species. Well, painted lips and nails seem a mild form of mutilation after that. And though men may not tint their nails, I believe they spend a good deal of their time being manicured.'

"She even defends painted toenails! She says that if they 'get the much-abused feet of women out of the high-heeled shoes that misshape the feet and throw the spine out of plumb, then it is a certain fact that the Major's own family doctor would approve.'

"And she asks: 'Suppose a woman wanted to angle for the Major—what would be the most efficacious means, harpoon or fine-meshed net? . . .'

"Now then," the Major continues, "let's look into all this. I think I ought to be allowed to state what I see, for I'm a believer in real Women's Rights: I believe a woman has a right to be executed when she's a murderer, and a right to be set right when she's wrong.

"I suppose," he supposes, "that Mrs. Kestler thinks men are as vain as women, in their own way. I suppose that's what she means when she says they spend a lot of time and money being manicured. Well, they aren't, and they don't. Those who do do it because they like to have their hands held. Did you ever hear of a hard-to-look-at manicurist being man-popular?

"No; I'll tell you what men spend their time on: they spend their time keeping their nails clean, whereas if you will only take one good look at the ends of a lot of these red finger nails——"

Only then does he turn to another phase:

"I don't get the point Mrs. Kestler tries to make about painted toe nails. She thinks the chance to show these is responsible for an end of high-heeled shoes, and that that's a sign of toe-painting women's good sense, men being fools to object to the practice.

* * *

"But it wasn't men who put women's feet into high-heeled shoes; it wasn't men who kept them there—it was women. And what's more, toe-paint has not got 'the much-abused feet of women out of high-heeled shoes'—not long enough at a time to reshape the feet or readjust the spines. The very women that sport the reddest toe-nails on the beach at high-tide are the women who wear the shoes, that night, with heels higher than any high tide that ever struck Newfoundland."

Says the Major: "Mrs. Kestler asks you to imagine any woman of this year's vintage getting into a hobble skirt and 'steel stays,' or wearing a bustle or a 'rat'—and she pretends to expect you to have a difficult time imagining it. Honestly, though, does any man find that difficult to imagine? If you could get one of these red-conscious women to tell the truth about it, wouldn't she admit it was dead easy?

"And why? 'Steel stays'—which were plain 'corsets' when they were fashionable—'rats' in the hair, or garret; just what were they actually all for?

* * *

"It doesn't matter whether the mutilations are 'milder' or stronger. Their mildness or their strength isn't one-two-three with women. Mrs. Kestler says that in the Gay Nineties these bustles and things were 'the bait used to attract the male.' If men hadn't got tired of that bait, it would be being used right now, and if men began to like it tomorrow, it would be forthcoming. So would nose-rings.

* * *

"'The bait to attract the male!' 'There's the phrase that gives away the whole show."

Writes the Major: "My case is that extremist women (all unmarried, you'll notice) do these extreme things to hook men—and then, if the fishers find out the hook or bait doesn't work (as they will about these red nails), they go on to some other 'bait.' The nature of the bait isn't what counts with them. The only thing that counts with them is the poor fish . . .

"And yet Mrs. Kestler complains that I 'have a sharp eye for danger signals.'

"Why such signals would blind a searchlight!

"Well, then, to wind up," winds up the Major, "this critic wonders what would be 'the most efficacious means' for a woman who 'wanted to angle for me.' And I'll tell her.

"The answer is 'None.'

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON

AT SEA—Dear Aleck: I guess you have been wondering, Aleck, how long we would be at sea. Well, this is the last night. It is what is called the captain's night. At dinner we throw confetti and toss balloons and make noises with noise-makers and have wine. We are doing honor in our quaint American way, Aleck, to as genial a sailor as ever sailed the seven seas, Capt. H. T. McCaw.

It was inevitable that the Southern lawyer would make a speech in praise of him and just as inevitable that he should be selected to award the prizes for the various contests which we have had on board. I won a pocketknife, Aleck, for being the best comic. Isn't that success, though?

• • • •

What made a lot of people mad, though, Aleck, was the awarding of the prize for the most beautiful outfit in the costume parade to the young wife of the elderly fish merchant and the young Adonis in whose company she has been very much. The plain truth is, Aleck, that they wore very little of anything, and all the women say they were just given the prize because of their looks.

Humph! Well, I am not the one to talk, Aleck, but the beautiful young wife talked to me confidentially the other night.

"I understand," she said, "that I am being talked about. Do you see anything wrong in my going about with Pietro? (He's a young Italian architect, Aleck. I don't know what his name is. We call him Pietro.) After all, he likes to swim and dance and do the things I like to do and my husband is one of those tired business men staying at home. I am full of life."

• • • •

I snapped her right up, Aleck. I said: "You made a contract as we men do in business, didn't you? As a matter of honesty, you ought to live up to it."

I am with my family, Aleck, and therefore for the sanctity of the home. Not only that, my friend who got off to such a good start aboard, if you know what I mean, Aleck, because of his tragic air, but who sort of lost out in the subsequent competition—he said to me, Aleck:

"It gives me a pain the way our American girls fall for these foreigners."

You know, Aleck, I'll bet it is really what starts wars, if you know what I mean.

• • • •

We finally won out, though, Aleck. It was a case of mind over matter. The word went around the boat that she and Miss Strowbar, the blonde beauty, were going to Paris with the young Italian and a Hollander. The two girls had originally intended to go to London from Havre. Now, why should they change their plans, Aleck? I'll ask you that. You can bet your life that all of us who were not going to Paris with the beautiful blonde and the beautiful wife of the elderly fish merchant talked about the matter a lot.

We decided that it was outrageous, and after we decided that, Aleck, we would, one by one, simply ease up to one of the beautiful girls and say, "Oh, ho, I understand you girls have changed your plans and are going to Paris with the Hollander and the Italian."

It certainly did work, Aleck. The girls got more and more fidgety. Finally they announced to one and all that they had decided to stick to their original plans and go on to London from Havre. It was certainly a big victory for the more righteous or hamstrung element aboard ship, Aleck.

• • • •

It was only this morning, Aleck, as we approached Havre, that I realized just what a victory it was we had won.

I was talking to the beautiful wife of the fish merchant.

"I think it is so foolish," I said, hypocirtically, "for you girls to lie over in Havre a whole day and half a night when you could run right into Paris."

"So do I," she agreed, "but if we did people would talk."

"People are so narrow minded," I said.

Makers Don't Use a Cheap Motor to Cut Cost of Swell Car

By Robert Quillen.

Today a little factory closed and left its employes jobless because it couldn't pay the "high wages" required by the NRA. It had been paying its workers $1 a day.

Some lovers of liberty will say: "It isn't right. In order to meet competition, a man must sell cheap. To sell cheap he must keep his production cost low. To do that he must pay low wages, and nobody has a right to interfere."

That wouldn't be good argument even if human beings were mules. It pays to give work mules enough feed.

This isn't the fourteenth century. People are not serfs, to be worked to death under the whip.

The first business of civilization is to give every man the right and opportunity to earn a comfortable and adequate living. There can be no lasting prosperity or security for anybody until that is done.

We can't fix the price of goods and then adjust wages to maintain it. The living wage must come first, and everything else must be adjusted to that foundation.

If an industry can not live without paying starvation wages, the country will be better off without it. The worker must be enabled to consume what he produces or all industry will come to an end.

The starvation wage factory is a price-cutter. Its own workers are not the only sufferers. By starving them it is able to undersell factories that pay fair wages, and as these factories lose business they are forced to discharge part of their workers.

Thus the workers who might earn fair wages are unable to find jobs because their work is done by paupers.

It is easy to undersell and destroy legitimate producers if you can find workers desperate enough to work for almost nothing. Japan is doing it. She is capturing the world's markets by pauperizing her workers. But you can't build prosperity that way. Japan must sell her products abroad because her own people are too poor to buy.

If a business can't pay decent wages and survive, let it die for the common good and let its patronage go to a fair-wage factory and its workers find jobs there.

The country doesn't need a cut-throat contractor who must starve his work-stock to make ends meet.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Appointment With O'Hara.

BEFORE us today, with his first novel tucked under his arm, stands John O'Hara. You've seen his name time and time again in the New Yorker, Harper's Bazaar, and Scribner's. Let me tell you he has an eye in his head of the sharpest kind; he knows, and knows intimately, more species of the American genus than you and I are likely to meet in a day's street-car ride; and he can write great snakes and blue guns.

THEO. HALL

Yet for all that, his novel—"Appointment in Samarra" (Harcourt-Brace, $2.50)—leaves me with extraordinarily mixed feelings. In a word, the book got entirely under my skin—and I neither like nor approve it.

The title comes from a fable of Somerset Maughan's, gist of which is an appointment with death. And death (along with vast quantities of liquor, innumerable seductions, and acres of hard-boiled action) came to the inhabitants of a little coal-mining city in eastern Pennsylvania. Perfectly typical American city it is, with its bibulous country club set, its auto dealers, its bootleggers and cabaret singers and its respectable old families.

• • • •

Around smart, respectable Julian English (but not so solvent and not so austere) revolves this varied gallery of characters. But where nine out of ten other authors would have left them as types, Mr. O'Hara makes them round and individual. The big bootlegger stays with his wife and children on Christmas Day and worries about his mistress. Lute Fliegler, sterling husband, faithful employe, doesn't bother to ask what it's all about. Al Grecco, the gunman, may plan murder, but he knows a good man or a good woman when he sees one.

Certainly Caroline, Julian's admirable wife, is as well-drawn a portrait as one could ask for. Her mother, and Julian's father and mother, are people we know all around us. The life of the town is as recognizable as the palm of your hand.

And what does Julian English do? He drinks, insults, roughhouses, seduces, and quarrels his way to the front seat of his car in the garage, motor roaring, and doors closed.

• • • •

The point is, he is no villain. Nor is the style of the town half so cursed and barren as Lewis' Gopher Prairie, Minn. Nor are these people any more hopeless than we should expect this side of the millennium.

But out of it all, notwithstanding really remarkable passages of beauty and characterization, Mr. O'Hara makes nothing but an appointment with futility. The book belongs back in 1915—most of us are asking for something better now.

• • • •

Turn now, please, to K. T. Knoblock's "A Winter in Mallorca" (Harper, $2). Why publishers invoke kinship with Douglas' "South Wind" is more than I know, for I've seldom seen the comparison anything but suicidal for the would-be heir. Present example is among the sadder exhibitions of o'er-leaping the saddle and falling on t'other.

Which is not at all to say that Mr. Knoblock has not written a pleasant book, full of hilariousness and local color and preposterous people and goings-on. But dear me! —the merit of "South Wind" did not lie in Miss Wilberforce, that "synthetic lady-sot," however amusing—it lay in the fact that the characters actually said something. And these charming people don't say a blessed thing.

• • • •

It was only three summers ago that I first met the romances of John Buchan. I was up in Morgan Center, Vt., with Bernard DeVoto and his wife while he was writing "Mark Twain's America." Evenings, before the fire, we all read "Greenmantle" and "Witchwood" and "Courts of the Morning," and so on. The impression I got then has not left me—that Buchan is our supreme master of romantic adventure, that he makes Sabatini look like a scene-painter and Oppenheim look like a vice consul's clerk.

Here, then, is the latest by John Buchan, lawyer, soldier, historian, M. P., and Lord High Commissioner for Scotland—"The Free Fishers" (Houghton Mifflin, $2.50). It's set in Scotland at the beginning of the last century, full of brave men and lovely women and rich excitement. Mr. Buchan writes superbly. All I can say, to paraphrase Sir Philip Sidney, is that he cometh unto you with a tale which holdeth debutantes from play and old stock brokers from the chimney corner.

George Herbert.

The three enemies of the Good Life are now, as they have been for the last 8,000 years, the World the Flesh and the Devil. The Rev. George Herbert's particular enemy was the World.

He was born in 1593 and belonged to an aristocratic family, whose members took prominent parts in the social and political life of the day. His brother was a tremendous swell. George went to Cambridge, where, like Milton after him, his chief diversion was music. Later he became public orator of the university, a position held today by the famous classical scholar, T. R. Glover.

His marriage was unusual. A friend had nine daughters and had often expressed publicly a wish that Mr. Herbert would marry one of the nine, but especially Jane, because she was rather his favorite. Mr. Herbert came, looked them over, and in three days he and Jane were married. It was a complete success. Isaac Walton said, "there never was any opposition betwixt them unless it were a contest which should most incline to a compliance with the other's desires."

This high-bred gentleman, ideally fitted for the life at the university or in London society or at court, was driven by his conscience and his deeply religious convictions, into the church. He accepted the pastorate of the tiny church at Bemerton, 1 mile from the great cathedral at Salisbury. Here his sermons deeply affected the congregation, but an even greater influence was exerted by his sincere and beautiful character. He lived there only three years, dying in 1633. Even today the little church seems full of his spirit. His personality pervades it. I advise all Americans who visit the cathedral at Salisbury, to take the time to enter the church at Bemerton, only 1 mile away, and see where Herbert lived and preached and wrote his poems.

In the language of St. Paul, Herbert's life was a living sacrifice. Fitted to adorn the charming society of gay, witty, and cultivated ladies and gentlemen, he spent his days and nights with his humble parishioners.

The year he died, 1633, his book of poems was published, under the title "The Temple." It had an enormous success, going through many editions. It is a combination of shrewdness, wit, imagination, and sincere piety. He counseled moderation—"Drink not the third glass." He did not scruple to make curious plays on words—Dean Briggs, said Herbert was the only man who could "quibble reverently." But the real struggle of his life is shown in his masterpiece, the poem called "The Collar."

The Collar.

I struck the board, and cried, "No more;
I will abroad!
What! shall I ever sigh and pine?
My lines and life are free; free as the road,
Loose as the wind, as large as store.
Shall I be still in suit?
Have I no harvest but a thorn
To let me blood, and not restore
What I have lost with cordial fruit?
Sure there was wine
Before my sighs did try it; there was corn
Before my ears did drown it;
Is the year only lost to me?
Have I no bays to crown it,
No flowers, no garlands gay? all blasted
All wasted?
Not so, my heart; but there is fruit,
And thou hast hands.
Recover all thy sigh-blown age
On double pleasures; leave thy cold dispute
Of what is fit and not; forsake thy cage,
Thy rope of sands
Which petty thoughts have made; and made to thee
Good cable, to enforce and draw,
And be thy law,
While thou didst wink, and wouldst not see.
Awake! take heed;
I will abroad.
Call in thy death's-head there, tie up thy fears:
He that forbears
To suit and serve his need
Deserves his load."
But as I raved and grew more fierce and wild
At every word,
Methought I heard one calling, "Child:"
And I replied, "My Lord."

Portable Schools Will Be Erected

Several to Be Constructed in Westminster.

Westminster, Md., Aug. 16 (Spl.). The building committee of the Carrol County Board of Education announced yesterday that several portable buildings will be erected on high school grounds here.

Peery Handed Flour Report

Purchases Outside State Are Required Because of Lower Bids.

Richmond, Aug. 16 (AP).—Gov. George C. Peery said today that a check of purchases by Virginia institutions had revealed that from July 1, 1933, to June 30, 1934, 17,721 barrels of winter wheat flour were purchased.

Requirement that the State buy from the lowest bidder caused purchase of 3,441 barrels outside the State.

The figures were developed in a report to the Governor by the State Purchasing Department.

They showed that of the remainder consumed by the State, 11,007 barrels were purchased from Virginia millers and 3,273 barrels from firms domesticated in Virginia. In the latter instance the wheat from which the flour was milled was also grown outside Virginia.

Minimum Pay For Give-a-Job Drive Sought

Proposal Made to Prevent Offering Low Wages to Needy.

A proposal to establish minimum wages for workers who obtain jobs as a result of the "give-a-job" campaign next month was presented yesterday at a meeting in the office of Elwood Street, director of public welfare.

Mr. Street said the object of the plan is to prevent persons from "chiseling" on the needy by offering extremely low wages. Those unwilling to pay the minimum would not be supplied with workers from the District's job rolls.

Neighborhood groups may be formed to undertake employment of one or more persons. Each member would employ a worker part time. This scheme is believed likely to bring about employment of many hundreds of persons full time at wages adequate to sustain them.

John Locher, Building Trades Council; George W. Beasley, Federation of Civic Associations, and Thomas L. Groom, District Bankers Association, attended the meeting. Committee members refused to divulge details of their plans until after they had been submitted to Commissioner George E. Allen, out of the city on a vacation.

Emphasis will be placed on giving jobs to bona fide residents of Washington, Mr. Street said.

4 Men Seized In Game Raid

Police Act After Allegedly Betting in Cigar Store on L Street.

Four men were arrested yesterday when vice squad police raided a cigar store in the 1600 block of L street northwest. They were held on gambling charges.

Booked at the Third Precinct station, the prisoners said they were Louis W. Dove, 28, of the 3500 block of Garfield street northwest; John L. Brenner, 46, of the 3200 block of Hyatt place northwest; Frank E. Brown, 28, of the 900 block of Fourteenth street northwest and George Econmu, 33, of the 600 block of Kenyon street northwest.

Police said they made various gambling bets at the reputed establishment and secured a raiding warrant. Dove was charged with permitting gaming, while the others were held on counts of accepting bets.

Bellhop Is Robbed Of $60 by Thug

Victim Forced Into Car and Pockets Rifled.

A bandit, his face masked with a handkerchief, yesterday held up Ernest Kimbraugh, 32, bell boy at the Broadmoor Apartments, 3601 Connecticut avenue northwest, and robbed him of $60, police were told.

Kimbraugh was returning from the bank with money for the apartment cashier. The bandit, he said, stopped him near Connecticut avenue and Porter street and, backing his demands with a revolver, told him to get into a waiting automobile.

After driving through Rock Creek Park, Kimbraugh said, the robber rifled his pockets and pushed him from the car near Nineteenth and Kenyon streets northwest. The bandit was described as colored, about 35, and neatly dressed.

Here's a "primitive savage" visiting Washington. He is one of the Indians who ran, accompanied by a motor bus, from Niagara Falls to Washington to advertise a celebration there. His press agent says his name is Young-Man-Kick-a-Hole-in-the-Sky. Confidentially, he says his name is Noah Henry, that he served with the Fifth Marines, that he has traveled over most of the world and that, among other things, he attends world series games regularly. He obligingly posed for this picture of a primitive man on a vacation but, confidentially again, he didn't seem altogether unfamiliar with hotel rooms.

43% Increase In Drunk Cases Here Reported

Methodist Board Finds Quarter's Average 50% Over Baltimore.

Average monthly arrests for drunkenness were 50 per cent greater in Washington than in Baltimore during the first three months of 1934, according to figures for 192 cities issued yesterday by the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals.

Local arrests increased 43.24 per cent over the average for the same period in 1933, before repeal, while Baltimore's decreased 18.13 per cent.

There were 17.9 murders per 100,000 of population here in 1933, as compareid with 15 in 1932, according to a report recently made public by the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Manslaughter Cases Drop.

Manslaughters dropped from 6.6 per 100,000 in 1932 to 6.2 in 1933. Other crimes which decreased were, per 100,000: robberies, from 209.7 to 206.4; burglary, from 631.2 to 589.3; petty larceny, from 209.1 to 201.7, and auto theft, from 739.8 to 679.

Crimes which increased were, per 100,000: Aggravated assault, from 37.6 to 44.4, and grand larcency, from 761 to 838.6.

The Methodist board's survey reveals that arrests in the 192 cities for driving while drunk increased 11.11 per cent in the first quarter of 1934 over the corresponding period in 1933, and 14.96 per cent over the first three months when beer was sold legally.

Increase Averages 19.19 Per Cent.

A study of statistics for "control" and "noncontrol" areas, shows that while the average increase of arrests for drunkenness in the 192 cities was 31.68 per cent for the first quarter of 1934, over the first quarter in 1933, the average increase was only 19.19 per cent.

Washington is reported as having had a monthly average of 1,891 arrests for drunkenness during the first three months of 1934; Baltimore, 1,233; Philadelphia, 4,848, and New York only 585.

Wine Libeled, Charge in Suit

Damages of $25,000 were asked of Austin, Nichols & Co., 920 E street northwest, in District Supreme Court yesterday by Louis and James Miglioretti, of Baltimore, wine distributors.

The plaintiffs, through Attorney Walter C. English, charged that agents of the Nichols company called upon several of their customers here and informed them that the wines of the "Italian-Swiss Colony Wines" in bulk were not the wines of the "Swiss Colony grade." The plaintiffs were said to have been pictured as having falsely represented the wines sold to a local store as "Italian-Swiss Colony grade wines" in a statement allegedly made by an employe of the defendant.

The charge that the wines were not of the grade represented resulted in the loss of customers, the plaintiffs said.

Dealers' War Holds Capital Gas Price Low

Public Continues to Get Cheap Fuel; Market in Deadlock.

Continued low prices for gasoline were in store for Washington motorists today as each side in the Capital's latest gas price war waited for the other to make the first peace moves.

A standard price for regular-grade gasoline prevailed throughout the District with the exception of one independent dealer operating three stations and a tank wagon service, where the price was 10 cents.

Major company officials and the independents maintained that 12 cents for motor gas represents the lowest price at which gasoline can be sold here without loss.

The major companies—Standard, American, Texas, Cities Service, Gulf, Sinclair—blamed price cutting on the part of the independents for opening hostilities and awaited overtures from them before venturing to return prices to a profit basis.

Independent operators placed the responsibility for the war on the major companies, some of which, it was claimed, had been giving discounts to preferred customers before the independents posted the first price cuts Saturday.

Independents and major company officials alike doubted that prices generally would go lower, though they were unable to predict how long the war would continue.

Prices in the District ranged from 12 to 15 cents, depending upon grade, a reduction of 3.8 to 4.8 cents.

Ickes Selects Hospital Body

Public Works Administrator Harold Ickes yesterday announced the members of a special commission ordered by President Roosevelt to determine the best site for a District tuberculosis hospital.

The committee comprises:

Dr. Charles M. Griffith, medical director of the Veterans' Administration; Col. C. D. Buck, chief of the Fitzsimmons Army Tuberculosis Hospital at Denver, and Dr. Lawrason Brown, head of the Saranac Lake Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

Ickes said he expected the committee would assemble in Washington at once and investigate the Glenn Dale and other suggested sites.

As Ickes is going out of Washington today and will be away until the middle of next week, it is not expected that he will see the District Commissioners or Health Officer William C. Fowler regarding the Glenn Dale site.

Maj. Gotwals To Be Retired

Retirment of Maj. John C. Gotwals, Engineer Commissioner, was ordered yesterday by the War Department.

Maj. Gotwals will be retired as of September 30 because of physical disability. In the meantime, the department granted him leave amounting to one month and 18 days, but that will not be much good to the Commissioner.

"I have too much work on my desk," he said at his home yesterday, where he was confined by a cold. "I'll go along working until the job is done or a successor is appointed to fill my place as Commissioner."

President Roosevelt has announced his intention to name a new Commissioner within the next day or two. Although no official word has been said about the identity of the new Commissioner, it is believed that Maj. Brehon B. Somervell will get the post.

Crashes Kill Capital Pair, Baltimorean

Accidents Injure 3 Others as Safety Observers Have Busiest Day.

Three persons were killed in automobile accidents in nearby Maryland yesterday.

Isadore Greenwald, 25, of Baltimore, died almost instantly when his light truck collided with a heavy vehicle, bearing newsprint paper, on the Baltimore & Ohio bridge at Halethorpe, Md.

The big truck was driven by Richard Roberts, 400 block M street northwest. Roberts was released after questioning, but State police said he would be called to testify at an inquest.

Two Die as Car Hits Pole.

When their light coupe struck a trolley pole at Hyattsville, Oddie Bruce, 21, of the 700 block Hobart street, and Mrs. Etta Tryer, 30, of the 3100 block Eleventh street, both colored, were killed instantly.

The automobile smashed into the pole when it speeded out Rhode Island avenue and failed to make a turn. The victims were thrown over the ties of the tracks.

A similar accident occurred last spring, when two young Washington bank clerks were killed at the corner.

In Washington the traffic safety committee of 100 observers experienced its busiest day since the drive began almost a month ago. A total of 86 reports arrived at the Traffic Bureau.

Nine trucks and seven cabs were cited. There were 19 reports of failure to obey the stop sign at Connecticut avenue and Tilden street northwest.

Three Hurt in Capital.

Leonard Williams, 15, and Samuel Jones, 17, both of the 1200 block of Thirtieth street northwest, were injured seriously when their motorcycle collided with an automobile on Lee highway at Cherrydale.

Physicians at Georgetown Hospital, where the pair were taken, said Jones had a fractured skull and left leg, and Williams a fractured thigh. The automobile was driven by Lloyd E. Kirby, of Fairfax. He was not held.

In Washington, Earl Darr, 12, first block of Sixth street northeast, was cut and bruised when he fell from the back of a truck. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

School Official Off to Parley.

Richmond, Aug. 16 (AP).—State Superintendent of Public Instruction Sidney B. Hall left today for Virginia Beach, where the State board of education meets tomorrow and Saturday. The board's business will deal mainly with State teachers' colleges.

They will be attired in apple green taffeta frocks with which they will wear large leghorn hats trimmed with the green taffeta. They also will carry yellow African daisies.

Little Miss Rose Gardner, the flower girl, will wear a Kate Greenway frock of white point d'esprit and a poke bonnet of leghorn.

Mr. Herrick will be attended by Mr. Warren Delano Robbins, jr., son of the United States Minister to Canada and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins. Minor Poet's Love Lyrics Still Popular

Laurence Hope, Dead 30 Years, Charms Her Readers Yet.

Her Works Ordered for Library; Ten Aren't Enough.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

POEMS of such famous women as Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Christina Rosetti are as popular today as when they were first published. But none are more widely read than those of Laurence Hope, a lesser light, but the first feminine figure in English literature to express artistically the life of the East.

Attention to this fact has been called by Valta V. Parma, director of the rare book collection of the Library of Congress, who reports that Laurence Hope's works are still so much in demand not one of the ten listed in the card catalogue was available when a Congressman's secretary recently called for a volume.

The secretary was eventually referred to the rare book room, which has a first edition of "India's Love Lyrics," Laurence Hope's most popular work. Since then, other volumes have been ordered for the rare book collection. "Because," as Mr. Parma expressed it, "we certainly don't want to disappoint readers searching for this woman's lovely poems."

"A Man," Says Crooner.

Considering that a popular radio crooner and orchestra director recently referred to Laurence as "a man," it would seem Mr. Parma's mention of Laurence Hope as a woman was apropos.

What is the explanation for the persisting popularity of the Hope poems? Why are "India's Love Lyrics," "Stars of the Desert" and "Indian Love" as widely read today as they were 30 years ago?

Richard Garnett, the English critic, anticipated these questions and answered them in an article in the London Bookman shortly after Laurence Hope's death in 1906, as follows:

"Had Laurence Hope, like George Sand, been capable of transferring her emotional enthusiasm to historical romance, or social politics, or the idyll of country life, she might have won a great name, but emotion with her was absorbed by a single passion; like that other Hope of Mr. Watt's canvas, she had but one string to her lyre. But that one string was capable of searching heights and depths of passion few poets of this day and generation have reached."

Another critic, of a later day, explained her popularity as having its basis in the fact her poems are mainly suggestive, arousing the imagination without attempting to satisfy it.

Youth, Beauty, Love.

Still another commentator mentioned her poems, like all true art, are mainly subjective and centered around the great interests of life—Youth and Beauty and Love.

This might be said of the work of almost any great woman writer, but Laurence Hope's poetry has some unique qualities, elevating it in popularity above that of other more famous women authors.

Her aften-quoted and often-sung "Kashmiri Song" illustrates probably better than any other one poem her power to express Eastern sentiments in a universally appealing way. These lines, particularly, have in this regard been the subject of much favorable comment:

"Pale hands I love beside the Shalimar,
Where are you now? Who lives beneath your spell?
Whom do you lead on Rapture's road-way, far,
Before you agonize them in farewell?
* * * *
"Pale hands, pink tipped, like lotus buds that float
On those cool waters where we used to dwell,
I would have rather felt you 'round my throat,
Crushing out life than waving me farewell!"

In writing this, it would seem she felt the pulse of Eastern youth-in-love and translated it into poetry attuned to youth and love the world over. For these lines have been translated into a number of languages and set to music and sung in virtually every land.

But what of the life of this woman, whose poetry, written 30 years ago, has not diminished in popularity with the years?

Identity Was Secret.

Biographical data about her is fragmentary. English-born and reaching womanhood in an age when most women were reticent about revealing an interest in anything other than domestic duties and social events, she hid her identity by a penname so sucessfully that few of her friends knew Adela Florence Nicolson, the wife of an Englishman in Indian service, was Laurence Hope, the poet.

When "India's Love Lyrics" was published in 1902, however, it was so well received people became curious to find out something about the author and evehtually discovered who she was.

The favorable reception of this volume and subsequent ones established her as one of the most widely read of women poets. But, imbued with Indian ideas and Indian fatalism, fame obviously meant little to her. In 1906 she committed suicide as a result of grief over the death of her husband a few months before.

"Indian Love," her last volume, finished a month before her death, was published shortly afterward.

The fact that her contemporaries were eager to find an explanation for her untimely end was undoubtedly responsible for the fact that, until 1910, her last book was by far the most widely read of all her volumes.

Today, however, it is second to "India's Love Lyrics" in popularity, probably because the modern poetry lover is less interested in Adela Florence Nicolson, the victim of her own emotions, than in Laurence Hope, the poet, whose interpretations of love were so universally appealing they will probably be as popular a century from now as they are today.

Childish Adults Held One Cause of War

London, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Grown-ups with the psychological make-up of children are responsible for inharmony in the home and also for wars between nations, believes Dr. Elizabeth Sloan Chesser, noted physician.

Addressing the New Hearth Society Summer School at Malvern, Dr. Chesser said there was so much war talk because the world was ruled by child psychology. Too many politicians, she pointed out, were emotional adolescents.

Bug and Boy Stop Sidewalk Traffic in Rain

Scared Colored Urchin Is Held Spellbound by Strange Insect.

THE star of the performance that held rain-lashed spectators fascinated on the F street sidewalk yesterday afternoon, was a tattered, little colored boy. He shared the honors with a strange kind of bug.

The bug was much longer than ordinary bugs; he had a pale, pink belly, a back neatly striped in tan and green; his front feet were long and spiraled, and he was trying to climb a store window.

The little boy—he looked almost 5—had forgotten the pouring rain that ran down his blue overalls, and shone in little drops in his black hair. His eyes, big, brown and fearful, were on the bug.

He shouted in a high voice that squeaked a little from fright.

"Ow, I'm skeered." And he jumped frantically up and down on his brown, bare feet.

So strong was the bug's magnetism that he was unable to leave it.

Neither were the spectators who gathered around him. Umbrellas became hopelessly entangled as their owners pressed closer and closer around the boy.

A fat man shouted encouragement. "Step on him, buddy!" The boy was almost white with fright.

"Suh? Step on that thing? No, indeed! It might be a devil's darning needle, and if I step on it the devil will get me sure."

The fat man caught the bug on a string and handed it to the child, who held it at a quaking arm's length for a moment and then dropped it.

A manager from a nearby store came out and stood bareheaded in the rain. He explained soothingly to the child, to the onlookers, that the bug was perhaps a little different from the ordinary window shopper, but nothing to get excited about.

But the umbrellas continued to bob excitedly and to attract other umbrellas.

Turtle, 152, Wins Longevity Record

When the British acquired the island Mauritus in 1810, they also acquired a turtle, who at that time was known to be 44 years old. The turtle lived on in the artillery barracks at Fort Louis until 1918, when it died.

By living those 152 years under the supervision of inhabitants of the island, the turtle received the distinction of attaining a greater age than any other back-boned animal, says the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago.

The turtle was known to be 152 years old when it died. But since it was not young when captured, it is possible that it lived to be 200.

Yellow Chamois Gloves Come Back in Fashion

Hunting Leopards One Of Man's Early Pets

One of the earliest pets of man was the cheetah or hunting leopard, often referred to as the "greyhound of cats." Cleopatra had several cheetahs romping through the halls of her palace and often romped with them, according to "The Field Museum News."

Although the cheetah is a member of the cat family it has dog-like feet at the end of long, fleet legs. The animal, a native of Africa, India and southwestern Asia, is extremely skillful in stalking antelope.

She Wrote of Love

This is one of the few photographs of Adela Florence Nicolson, better known as Laurence Hope. Her "India's Love Lyrics," written more than 30 years ago, still retains the peak of popularity.

Beauty Is Community Property, Says Hollywood's Mme. Sylvia

It's Hard to Attain, but Quite Possible, She Declares in "No More Alibis," in Which She Lays Down Laws of Loveliness.

By Frances Mangum.

BEAUTY is community property. Step up and take your share, invites Sylvia, the physical culture mentor of Hollywood.

In a book, which she calls "No More Alibis," Mme. Sylvia, or Sylvia, as she prefers to be called, lays down the law to would-be beauties.

"Being beautiful isn't easy," she writes. "But you can if you will. In Hollywood the stars come to me and I give them the works. You have a harder job. You must give yourself the works and not complain. I pledge you my word that if you will string along with me and do what I tell you to do you will be as lovely as the stars of Hollywood!"

Sylvia has not minced words in her book. She knows the rules, and she puts them down in black and white. There seems to be no subject that she hasn't touched on from developing the bust to reducing noses. There are chapters on such topics as slenderizing the legs and ankles, taking away the "desk-chair spread," dieting for energy, and many others.

Clothes Tips.

To stylish stouts she says: "Wear plain clothes, rather tailored and not tight. Wear dark colors. No big patterns or flowers!"

Short women should observe Mary Pickford, Janet Gaynor and Marion Nixon and see how these stars have coped with the matter of clothes. To women of this type, Sylvia says:

"Wear long simple lines. Narrow, vertical stripes are good for you."

She advises thin girls to wear taffeta, girls with short waistlines to wear princess type dresses and to avoid belts. Tall girls, she says, are at their best in tweeds and slouch hats.

Women with narrow shoulders can cope with this defect, writes Sylvia, by wearing puffed sleeves for evening and afternoon, and padded shoulders for street.

There is a chapter on correcting facial and neck contours that will undoubtedly be an inspiration to all those with the face and neck droops.

"If you have a double chin," she warns, "never do any unnecessary stretching of the neck." And then she tells you what to do.

Sylvia No Theorist.

That is one thing about Sylvia. She never contents herself with merely saying don't do such an such a thing. She always goes further and lays down positive rules. And one must remember that Sylvia is no theorist. She has formed rules, yes. But she has seen them work.

She has helped Ruth Chatterton reduce her nose; Frieda Hempel slenderize her upper arms, Lawrence Tibbet, Mary Lewis, and Jeritza ovalize their round, plump faces; Jean Harlow take off several inches from her waistline, Norma Shearer reduce her legs. Although Sidney Fox and Ina Cliare both felt they could not reduce because they were anemic, Sylvia helped them lose just the right number of pounds and still retain excellent health.

She also taught Ann Harding to walk gracefully, and Gloria Swanson (who Sylvia says has the most beautiful feet of any star in Hollywood) to walk with her toes straight, and Joan Crawford correct posture.

Sylvia ends her book by saying, "I wish I were in Congress. I'd try to get a law passed that sloppy fat women should be arrested. You can have a nice figure. You can take care of your face. You're committing a crime against yourself when you don't!"

Walking Clubs In the Cities Grow "Smart"

Urban Fashionables Take to Woodland Trails for Exercise.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—As a fashionable exercise for women, walking is coming back into its own. The use of one's legs, in hiking, strolling, and generally wandering about, is becoming the proper thing. Many clubs of walkers are being organized, and groups of women walkers, suitably attired for this type of exercise, are to be found more and more in the fields and woods.

Sponsorship of the movement to make women walk more is being undertaken by the Woman's Home Companion, which is publishing an article to encourage the organization of groups of walkers throughout the country. It points out that there is a deep urge back of all this outdoor movement by women, and that it means exercise, health, recreation and a fine mental and physical stimulus.

Of course the movement is not entirely new. American women have been walkers for 100 years or more. Scattered walking groups of women existed in this country nearly a century ago, and increased slowly down to the end of the nineteenth century.

Autos Started It.

But a modern development which put increased energy into the movement was, curiously enough, the automobile. Twenty or thirty years ago walking was largely along country dirt roads. Forest trails, marked, mapped, available for the amateur explorer, such as now exist in many parts of the country, were little known and required the services of a local guide. But the automobile, bringing improved highways and the swift growth of hard pavements even out into the country back routes, drove the walker into the woods. She grumbled at the automobile when it made her country roads impossible but she found something infinitely better, the forest and mountain trails.

A few older clubs, like the Appalachian Mountain Club of Boston, had been slowly making trails in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, and the Fresh Air Club of New York knew the Highlands of the Hudson when its members were about the only walkers for recreation therein. There were also some Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast clubs. But from about 1910, when the era of asphalt and concrete paving got under way, new outdoor clubs sprang up in many cities.

Scheduled Outings.

As the clubs grew in number and membership, definite schedules of walks for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays met the demand for weekly outings, for social contacts and for nature study and enjoyment of nearby scenic attractions. Members of walking clubs located in the metropolitan areas of New York City, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles know the regions around their communities for 50 or a 100 miles, from yearly repeated excursions.

Eventually demands arose for camps or cabins where members could go for week-ends and summer vacations. Starting in small ways, sometimes with a second-hand army tent or a tiny shack, they have in many cases grown to large and comfortable establishments.

This has been particularly noticeable in metropolitan sections were mountain and forest areas, largely in public ownership, were within relatively easy reach. The Appalachian Mountain Club of Boston has its camps in the environs of that city.

Most of these clubs are mixed, and not a few marriages result. Word of this gets out and a good many young women, looking for types of men friends that they do not find otherwise, seek to join them. One club had to make a 50-50 sex division, else there would have been many more women than men and not enough men to do the heavy work around camp and on the trails.

Nature study is a feature of the program of most of the outdoor clubs, through committees devoted to that phase of walking. The forest trails offer rich fields for the pursuit of botany, geology, birds and insects.

Chinese Official Sets Office Hours for Gods

Gods must keep office hours, a Chinese district magistrate has decreed. And he has placed a "No gods received after noon," sign on his office door.

The drought is responsible for the ban on gods. Farmers have been bringing their household gods into town each day to pray for rain. These deities have to be first taken to the magistrate, with the result that this magistrate was kept busy with a stream of heavenly visitors at all hours of the day and night.

PILLAR To POST

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis Has Her Troubles With Ostrich Plumes.

MRS. J. HAMILTON LEWIS embarked on an odyssey, which included presentation at the Court of St. James and an audience with the Pope, without two very necessary kinds of wearing apparel. She omitted to take the three ostrich plumes that all women who make their bows before the King and Queen must wear as part of their coiffure, and the black stockings for the all-black costume obligatory for an appearance in the Vatican.

* * * *

It was impossible for her to find the right kind of ostrich plumes in the shops of New York or Washington. Here she was shown a miserable specimen of ostrich feather, so moth-eaten and dejected the store refused to sell it. In the New York shops she described the kind of luscious, nodding white ostrich tips that she wanted. One salesgirl brought out what she thought answered the description—a boa of coque feathers! So the wife of the Senator left these shores for London, where she felt sure the shops would be well-stocked with all the accessories needed for presentation at court. Likewise she waited until she reached Rome to purchase the black stockings for her audience with the Pope.

* * * *

The holy father greets groups of hundreds, but Mrs. Lewis, garbed in all black with a lace mantilla covering her head, had a special audience with him, granted to only a few at a time.

She was also invited to sit in the royal enclosure with King George and Queen Mary at the Ascot Races, the formal four-day meet. Looking as though they were dressed for an afternoon wedding, the men wore top hats, cut-away coats, striped trousers and white spats. The women wore chiffon and lace, with long trains and big, black picture hats. Most of the time it was cold and misty, and the women trailing over the wet grass to visit the paddocks or perching upon the railing to see the races shivered in their flimsy chiffons and laces. On the third day there was a hard downpour and the utilitarian raincoats worn over these formal dresses looked queer, indeed.

* * * *

Mrs. Hamilton suffered a dislocated shoulder before she left Washington and she found ease from the after effects in the volcanic mud baths at Albano-Bagni in northeast Italy. This watering place was resurrected out of the dim past by Mussolini. It was used by the Romans 2,000 years ago and with the decline of Rome it fell into disuse, becoming a fetid, scum-filled marsh. Mussolini had the age-old debris cleared away, and has made it into one of the most beautiful resorts in Europe, rivaling the Lido and Ostend.

* * * *

Accompanied by her niece and namesake, Miss Rose Lawton Morrison, she spent a delightful two months in England, France and Italy. Luncheons, parties, races, parades, theaters and balls filled the daily calendar of the visitors. In London Mrs. Lewis was a guest at the large and brilliant luncheon given by Ambassador Bingham for the mother of President Roosevelt. They witnessed the splendid Military Tatoo, Shakespearean plays at Oxford, they dined with many ambassadors. They met the Khedive of Egypt at a dinner, the President of France at a garden party and many other celebrities.

Intriguing Sneezes Wanted; Doctors Search for Ten

Chicago, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Ten women with the most intriguing sneezes are being sought by the University of Illinois' College of Medicine.

The women, who must be chronic asthma sufferers of the August and September variety, will be used in a test to determine whether electrical changes in the air during storms cause the ailment.

The test will be conducted by Dr. William H. Welker, head of the physiological chemistry department of the college.

The women will be locked up for several weeks in a hospital ward in which the air is filtered, cooled and dried. The air will be electrically charged, first positively and then negatively.

Dr. Welker said it has been established that asthma is an extension of hay fever when the irritation caused by pollen carried in the air moves from the nose to the lungs.

The difference between the two ailments, he explained, is that a storm aggravates the condition of asthma patients while hay fever sufferers are not affected.

Apples Don't Keep Doctors Away Now

Are Prescribed as Cure for "Summer Complaint."

The modern doctor may not be kept away by an apple a day, but he is quite likely to prescribe a raw apple diet when he comes, that is, if his patient is suffering from "summer complaint."

Dr. Harry Beckman, professor of pharmacology at Marquette University School of Medicine, Milwaukee, describes the treatment in his new book for physicians. He says:

"Its success has been so great that it will undoubtedly replace most of the other remedies in handling these cases."

The "cure" is quite simple. Ripe, mellow apples are peeled and cored and grated into a paste, which is fed to the patient for two days. No other food is eaten, and there is no limit to the amount of apples. At the end of the two days the patient is put on a normal diet consisting of foods rich in proteins and poor in milk and fats. If the cure is not completed, another two days of apples will complete it.

Radio Voices Terrify Aged Georgia Negro

Crooners, political speakers and blues singers may be all right in the flesh, but their voices coming over the radio terrify "Uncle" Butler, 121-year-old Georgia Negro. Uncle Butler was recently taken by his employer, Col. Maro S. Plotter, to see the Chicago Century of Progress. None of the sights surprised the ancient Negro. They seemed tame in comparison with the mystery of voices coming out of the air.

The High-Hats And Vagrants Mix for Music

Boston's Open-Air Concerts Attract Thousands to River Esplanade.

BOSTON, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Hoboes and high-hats, Brahamins and barbarians, have mingled nightly on the Charles River esplanade each summer for the past six years to listen to serious music by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The only annual free open-air concert played six nights weekly by members of a major symphony orchestra, they have attracted 1,250,000 persons, an average of 10,500 nightly during the three to four weeks' season.

To equal that attendance record would require ten years of the full music season at Symphony Hall at the rate of 2,000 persons twice a week.

Music for the masses has been a financial success as well. Large contributions from a small group first supported the idea, but the depression incapacitated some donors and an appeal was made to the public. Contributions boxes set up along the esplanade have averaged $130 nightly until this year, when Arthur Fiedler, conductor, stopped reminders to the audience during the concert. That brought it down to $75 a night, but there were outside donations, and a man who guaranteed the orchestra's pay roll had the contribution handed back to him when the season ended this past week.

When the concerts first were proposed the metropolitan district police worried.

"We had band concerts a few years ago," Capt. Albert Chapman recalled, "and there were more darned arrests and squabbles and fights. We'll need 100 men to police the Esplanade." Actually 15 were required, and there never has been an arrest. Small boys swiped brass poles, on which the contribution boxes rested. They returned them next day when newspapers protested the concerts' record had been spoiled. That was tops for crime on the Esplanade.

One hobo has been coming to Boston annually for the concerts. He stands each night in the same spot, listening intently, speaking to no one. A few feet away, Back Bay dowagers and Junior Leaguers are scattered through the crowd. He doesn't have the dime for a folding chair, so he stands.

A white-haired woman, evidently a Bostonian of the old school, bustled into her chair one night and started a conversation in which nuances, tonal values and acoustics were discussed learnedly and loudly. Another woman sat in back of her, a tattered shawl draped over her shoulders. She tapped the conversationalist on the arm.

"Y' ain't supposed to talk durin' the music," she said.

So there was occasion for the late Judge Frederick Cabot to remark: "For the first time in 300 years Bostonians are getting to know each other."

Mammy Is Almost 1-Woman Orphanage

Fayetteville, N. C., Aug. 16 (AP).—Old Mother Hubbard had nothing on Aunt Leah Williams, 85-year-old Negro mammy, who virtually is a one-woman orphanage.

During her life she has raised 110 children, only a few of them her own, and at times has had as many as 20 under the roof of her four-room home.

"When anything is homeless and hungry, it makes for my cabin," she says. "See them dogs over there? They's no-account hounds, but I ain't going to run 'em away."

For years Aunt Leah has taken in every homeless Negro child she has heard of. In her home are few chairs and frequently the children having no places to sit at meal time, stand around the table and sop their plates with flour flat cakes cooked on an old wood-burning range.

Rose Givers' Club Grows With Leaps

Good Deeds and Words Are "Roses" Members Scatter About.

"FLOWERS for the living," is the slogan of the Rose Givers Club, a unique organization that has spread from Somerset, Ohio, throughout the United States.

Its founder, Mrs. Neal Wyatt Kyle, State lecturer for the extension department of the University of Ohio and associate editor of the Somerset (Ohio) Press, is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Kelso, 1818 Kalorama road.

"The Rose Givers Club has grown like Jack's bean stalk," she said yesterday. "It started with one member, myself, and now there are thousands all over the country. Every State is represented, and some South American countries, too. At first it was local, then State-wide, and now National. Eventually it is going to be international." According to Mrs. Kyle's description, the Rose Givers Club is one which has no dues and holds no meeting. Its membership list has no limitations.

Their Creed.

"Our creed tells all there is about it," she said. "To be a rose giver is to find the beautiful in everything and everybody and to pass it on. To lend a helping hand, an encouraging word, and to see to it that we give flowers to the living while they can see and appreciate them," she quoted.

"The roses we refer to," continued Mrs. Kyle, "are good deeds and kind words.

"For instance, if a person finds a poem which is an inspiration to him, he should see that other people read the poem too. If it is sent in to me I publish it in the Rose Givers column, a feature of the Somerset Press. If anyone has a friend or acquaintance who gives 'roses' she may send her name in to me, and I send her a membership card to the club."

People sometimes receive the cards with no idea why, Mrs. Kyle said. She cited an instance of an old woman in Michigan who with the help of her daughter and the hired man ground out a living from a tourist camp. A friend of Mrs. Kyle's stopped there overnight. When she left the next morning the old grandmother gave her a bouquet of zinnias to "brighten her trip" she said. Mrs. Kyle's friend wrote to her about the instance and straightaway Mrs. Kyle sent the old woman a membership card, and enrolled her in the club.

Men Are Interested.

Because of her activities in the National Garden Club and Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Kyle gives many lectures aside from those in her university work. "At the end of my talks," she said, "I always tell the audience about the Rose Givers Club. Afterward many of them come up and ask me all about it. Surprising as it may seem men are usually deeply interested. They'll root around through their pockets, or some old notebook and pull out a clipping. 'Could you use that?' they'll ask me. 'It has helped me. Maybe it will help somebody else!'"

She has received many tributes of which she is very proud. One is a letter from Lowell Thomas of New York. "I feel greatly honored to be made one of the Rose Givers. Many thanks," he wrote.

Another is a note from Rabbi Jacob Tarshish, of Columbus. It reads, "I think this idea is a very lovely one and if more people were guided by the thought of saying pleasant things to those whom they know while they were alive, how much sweeter a world like ours would be."

Two-Person Families In Majority in N. Y.

New York, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Families consisting of only two persons, usually childless couples, outnumbered the other main classification of New York's families when an enumeration was made by the New York City Housing Authority. Results of the enumeration were announced yesterday.

Men Shoppers Show Strange Interest in Gifts

It Turns Out, However, the Attraction Is Gadgets for Drinking.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S an F street store which has one of the most interesting gift departments in town. From 9:15 in the morning until 6 at night one finds customers looking around. And strangely enough at least half these gift-seeking sight-seers are men. They'll walk in a bit shyly, their manner plainly saying that shopping just isn't one of the things they like to do. After a few minutes they lose their self-conscious restraint and before long they're looking this over and asking about that in as matter-of-fact manner as an avid woman shopper.

Just why does this particular department attract the gentlemen shoppers? There are the usual tables spread with $5 gifts, another with $2 and $3 gifts, and others with miscellaneous collections. All interesting, but not extraordinary. Shelves are neatly arranged with an assortment of glassware, silver pitchers, and cocktail sets. That's closer!

One of the sales girls said over half the masculine clientele inquired about cocktail sets, wine bottles, and smaller drinking gadgets. They explain they saw such and such a thing at so-and-so's and now they'd like to look at one for themselves.

They wax enthusiastic over the modernistic cocktail sets. The shakers are tall and cylindrical, chrome-trimmed with black bands around the top. They're accompanied by six chrome goblets and a large chrome tray.

The syphon bottle invariably takes their fancy. This is a one-quart size glass bottle encased in criss-cross wire stripes. The top is heavy looking with its mechanical device for loosing the carbonated contents.

Women who shop the town over looking for something to please a sweetheart, husband, father, brother, uncle or cousin can find no better hunting grounds than this spot already popular with men shoppers.

New Deal Puzzle.

Many people are puzzled about the New Deal. But that's because a local shop has some puzzles, called New Deal Puzzles. They consist of a number of wooden blocks inclosed in a box about 3 or 4 inches square. The blocks have letters which combined spell out "The New Deal." A couple of other blocks are thrown in to make the game more intricate. The object is to start with one arrangement, and by shifting the blocks around without removing them from the box to reach another combination.

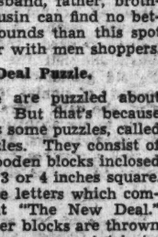
Here's a bushel of fun for only 25 cents.

History of Vibrators.

The way of vibrators is strange indeed. Several months ago a large supply arrived at a downtown store. The buyer placed them on the counter, and pfft, they were gone in two days' time. Their $1.29 price seemed to exercise a general appeal.

Elated over the quick selling power of these, the buyer quickly reordered, and history repeated itself. Women came, women called, inquiring about vibrators at such phenomenally low prices. The buyer ordered again. The counters were banked for the third time with electric vibrators, $1.29. Days passed into weeks and the vibrators still sat. The wave of popularity which had swept them along on its crest had gone. The vibrators were relegated to a less favored spot, and finally they were taken from the counter altogether.

A few days ago several women came in inquiring about vibrators. The signs of the times! The buyer took them out, placed them on the counter again, this time underneath an invitation to buy, reading 79 cents. And how they're going!



Have you ever used an electric vibrator? Some people like them for patting cream into the skin. Others like them for massaging a neck inclined to doubles and triples. There are those with insomnia, who say that an electric vibrator over the arms, neck, face, and scalp would start a wooden Indian dozing.

Scalp specialists agree that vibrators are splendid for exercising the scalp and keeping it in a healthy condition—thereby warding off falling hair, and the ominous gray shadow.

Italian Wine Bottles.

Tall Italian wine bottles have not been the sellers they were expected to be. Why? A difficult question. It's hard to believe that those who see aren't tempted.

They are tall, slender, graceful things with a heavy silver knob for the top, and copper rims around the sides relieved by bunches of silver grapes. Surely two of them on a buffet would speak a word of artistry for themselves.

Because they've been so ignored by shoppers their price has continued to drop; now a pair of them sells for about the same thing one of them used to.

Up-and-Coming Young Men Wear Something Like This

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—A man may be "a man for a' that"—but there are different kinds of men, as anyone can tell who takes a second look at what they are about to put on for fall. And it hardly needs even the second look to identify the man in the picture as one of the younger up-and-coming business getters.

He hasn't yet got to the established position where comfort in clothes can be his only thought. He knows clothes do help make the man and intends his clothes to make him look alert and up-to-date, but not so jazzy that his customers or his boss won't have confidence in him.

That's why you'll see him and his fellows wearing dark brown snap brim hats with silk bound edge, quietly striped silk rep ties, fine vertically striped shirts, clocked socks and moderately pointed shoes.

Then there's the man who's established himself in his job. Above all he wants comfort and conservatism in his clothes.

He'll be distinguished this fall by the soft patterns in his comfortable single-breasted gray suits. And by his snap brim hat in medium gray, his soft-collar white shirts, his blue allover patterned ties, plain black socks and comfortable, roomy-toed black calf shoes.

You can't miss this type man any more than you can miss the outdoor man.

The outdoor man's clothes have a casual, almost careless air that smack decidedly of the country. Yet he wears them so easily he "gets away with them" in the office, too.

He likes tweed, cheviot and shetland suits, often with sports backs which give him extra room to move about. They won't, however, be loud bold checks or plaids.

His hats will be of rough mixtures in game-bird colorings. His shirts, button-down collar oxfords, or, occasionally, a tweedy pattern. His socks, Argyle 6-and-3 rib wool. His shoes, wing tip, grained and brogue type. His ties, knitted or tweedy or rough silk.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Men's suits of the types described are available in Washington in all the better men's clothing shops and department stores.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

By Susan Mills.

GOOD red meat is a necessity on the summer menu. Now that the heat wave is undecided, try a steak dinner. It will be welcomed.

You have your favorite way of cooking steaks, whether broiling in broiler or pan. Here are a few "extras" that add variety.

The finishing touch to a real steak is to brush it all over the top with good, fresh butter; and for variety, a little lemon juice and chopped parsley mixed with the butter.

Halves of bananas, whole mushrooms, thick slices of firm tomato or slices of Bermuda onion are also delicious broiled accompaniments for a good porterhouse steak.

Housewives are always asking what to do with the often wasted "tail." Grind it with some of the cooked fat and mix it with left-over mashed potatoes, a little chopped parsley and an unbeaten egg and shape the mixture into small patties or cakes. Brown them carefully in butter and serve for lunch or supper with a crisp vegetable salad and a good dessert.

Try this summer "steak" menu:

Chilled Grapefruit Juice
Broiled Porterhouse Steak with lemon, parsley, butter
Broiled Bananas
Shoe String Potatoes
Rolls Butter
Cucumbers with sour cream dressing
Fresh Blackberry Tarts with Whipped Cream
Iced Coffee.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Oxygen Therapy.

Within recent years the use of oxygen gas has been shown to be of great value in pneumonia, cardiac failure, hyperthyroidism, post-operative shock, drug and gas poisoning, and in fact in any condition involving an insufficient supply of oxygen in the blood.

One of the earliest applications of oxygen therapy was that attempted in a large clinic where patients were placed in an oxygen chamber following surgical removal of the thyroid gland. The success of the use of oxygen in these cases led to further investigation, and proof is well-nigh conclusive as to the great value of oxygen in many diseases.

When the patient is placed in the so-called oxygen room the oxygen concentration is usually set at about 40 per cent. This is gradually increased as the patient shows the need of oxygen and can be adjusted at any desired level. The air in the oxygen room is constantly in circulation and the carbon dioxide exhaled by the patient and his attendants is absorbed by passing the air of the room over pans containing soda lime.

Another method of using oxygen for therapeutic purposes is by the insertion of a nasal catheter through which oxygen is constantly supplied to the posterior pharynx. Under this plan patients can remain in an ordinary hospital room. There is very little discomfort from the use of the nasal catheter, which is changed periodically from one nostril to the other to avoid irritation.

In cases of pneumonia the effect of the use of oxygen is usually striking. A patient who is laboring for breath, whose face and extremities are of a dusky color due to lack of oxygenation of the blood, whose temperature is high, and who is actually wearing himself out in his struggle for air, may within an hour after entrance to the oxygen room present a most satisfactory appearance.

What Today Means

"Leo."

If August 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m.

This date may be marked by a prevalence of good humor existing in most of the marts of trade. Business will, to a certain extent, display a responsive activity to the stimulating effect of optimistic cheerfulness. You may be called upon to do something that is not exactly required of you by regular routine. Should this occur a ready acquiescence may bring about a substantial showing of appreciation. Your dwindling financial resources may receive a healthy bolstering up very shortly which should enable you to get something you have had your heart set on for a long time. A very commonplace event, which might hardly attract your attention may take place on this date, and there is a possibility it will have an important bearing on your future. Be careful you accord any stranger that comes inside your doors a courteous reception, for rudeness might in time prove a boomerang.

If a woman and August 17 is your birthday, your imaginative powers should enable you to accomplish big things. Your figment of thoughts can, if constructed along the right lines and diverted into the proper channels, prove highly profitable. Journalism, or short story writing should receive your careful consideration as a means of livelihood. Many born on this date have also found vast opportunities for self-expression through some form of creative art. Love will prove a powerful factor in your life, and a great deal of happiness should result from it.

The child born on August 17, as it grows up, may display evidence of originality which will border close to genius. Care should be used to determine what profession or career this child is best fitted to follow, and its education should be preparatory for the one decided on.

If a man and August 17 is your natal day, you should gain a recognized position in whatever line of work you engage. Your originality of thought and power of expression should prove marvelous assets.

POTOMAC PARK

By CAROLYN COX

In the crowd with which Wanda Mallory travels is a girl named Priscilla, who has two rival suitors. Nick, a young man in the same circle, and Peter Carlin, who is in Washington to do some lobbying for the cosmetic business he owns. Priscilla gives a party in order to have him meet a Congressman, Ezekiel Tolliver, but Carlin gets drunk and Tolliver is unimpressed. Priscilla is in tears, because by making fun of him in his intoxicated state, Nick has contributed to the fiasco. Also at the party is Wanda Mallory, who loves David Randall, the mystery man of the story.

ALL the fun went out of Nick's face. He was young—younger than one of his years has a right to be. Wanda loved the boy like a favorite brother, knowing that his heart was loyal, his intentions good, and that all his faults came from exuberance of spirits.

She knew that Phiscilla was silly and theatrical, but she felt sorry for her, too. Disappointment is no less bitter because the aim is not high. Priscilla had worked hard to make her little party a success. Being hopelessly self-centered, she had doubtless thought first of her favorable impression upon the guests, but she had wanted them to have a good time, too. Perhaps her desire to help Carlin was unselfish and sincere.

Wanda was ashamed that she had lent her laughter to Nick's funmaking, and wanted to say something comforting to Priscilla, but did not know how to do it without being disloyal to Nick.

He shifted from one foot to the other, genuinely distressed. If there had been a nice deep river handy, he might have plunged into it then.

Another Visitor.

He had hurt the woman he loved, and love is a beautiful thing, laying a glamorous velvet cloak around imperfections. She was undoubtedly dear to him, regardless of his adolescent manner of expressing his affections.

"Aw, Priscilla!" he pleaded. "Don't cry! I was only kidding."

Her only answer was an angry sob.

The doorbell rang.

Priscilla, perhaps thinking it was Mr. Carlin, and either dreading to show her tear-stained face or anticipating the effect on his masculine tenderness, did not lift her head.

Gardenia admitted David Randall and stole back to the kitchen without taking off his coat. Wanda went to him and laid her hand on his sleeve.

It Was Randall.

He had come at last. Her faith in him lifted her on wings to fan the stuffy air about them for a brief ecstatic moment before nestling in his protecting kindness.

"Do I intrude?" he asked, puzzled by his welcome. "Has Miss Starr—had bad news?"

Nick shifted uneasily. "I was only kidding, and Priscilla——"

"He made a fool of me!" she sobbed. "He made fun of my guests and ruined my party."

Wanda's sober little face confirmed it. She thought Priscilla was a cry-baby, but David would not have been her David if he had laughed, too. She was not prepared for the fury that blazed in his face and clenched his fists as he turned upon Nick as if about to strike him. Nick stepped out of his way, not from fear, for he was not a coward, but instinctively, to stare at him in amazement from a safe distance. Wanda was frightened. David relaxed, ashamed, and laid his hand gently on Priscilla's bowed shoulders. He did not speak for a moment, and then turned to Nick.

Randall Chides Him.

"You are young, my friend," he said in a voice that was more sorrowful than angry. "When you are as old as I, and have suffered as much from thoughtless ridicule, you'll confine your kidding to matters which are impersonal."

"Aw, Mr. Randall, you don't understand the situation. I was just——"

"He did it on purpose," sobbed Priscilla. "He was jealous. It was the first party——"

"I'm sorry I was detained, Miss Starr," David said gently. "I'm sure it was a nice party. The decorations are very attractive."

Wanda loved him for that. Personally, she had thought Priscilla's lavish decoratoins very silly.

"Aw, let me apologize, Priscilla," Nick begged, "I didn't mean——"

Carlin Back.

"We've got a chance, Priscilla!" he called as she lifted her head a mere trifle. "Dovey says—My God!"

He stopped short and stared with popping eyes at David Randall, who stared back at him, white as a ghost.

Wanda shivered. There was defiance in David's manner, and shrinking, too. He knew this man—and this man knew something about him which David had tried to keep from them all.

For the time that it takes reverberations to die after the tolling of a bell, there was no sound in the ghostly still room.

"My God!" Carlin repeated hoarsely. "Are you alive?"

"Yes . . . Yes, of course . . . What do you mean?"

David's voice was hardly audible and Carlin's scarcely more so as the dialogue went on in a low, shocked tone.

"She said you were dead. Last summer she said so."

"Who did?"

"Your wife. 'He's been dead five years,' she said. 'I'm all alone in the world.'"

Tense Situation.

"You saw her?"

"Yes. I stopped off between trains, and happened to meet her on the street."

"Did she—did you see—my son? Is he well?"

"Oh, he is dead. A truck did it, she said. I know she wasn't lying about that, because she cried."

Life drained out of David Randall. He was only a petrified stone.

The loudest sound in the room was the patter of raindrops on the window.

His lips moved. "When?"

"She didn't say," Carlin's voice unconsciously dropped to a whisper, hushed by the sudden, uncanny silence. "Yes, she did, too. Let's see. She said—she said, 'Just the week before his ninth birthday.' Know how old he was?"

"Nearly three years ago! . . . Three years—and she let me go on—never told me——"

His breath came in asthmatic gasps, and he stumbled toward the door.

Nick opened it and would have gone with him, but Randall put out his hand to stop him.

"No—don't. I want to—to be alone."

Wanda had followed them into the hall. His misery was like a twisted knife in her side, but he did not look at her as he stepped into the elevator and dropped out of sight.

Wanda Followed.

She waited with Nick for the elevator to take them upstairs, and they saw through the open doorway that Peter Carlin had taken the weeping Priscilla into his arms to comfort her.

The elevator stopped for them.

Wanda slipped into the bedroom from the hall without going through the living room. She could hear Zeke and Kentucky gayly chattering about the folks back home as she took her hat and coat from the closet and sat on the bed to fasten her galoshes.

"I'm going to him," she whispered, emotion driving her thoughts toward audible expression. "I don't care if he does want to be alone. He needs me. I know he needs me. I'm going. I don't care what he thinks."

She stole out unobserved, and walked through the rain until she found a taxicab.

Oyster Diet Urged For Curing Anemia

Baltimore, Aug. 16 (AP).—Dr. E. Jack Coulson, of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, told a joint convention of the Oyster Growers and Dealers Association and the National Shellfisheries Association today that oysters could play an important part in curing nutritional anemia.

Scientific experiments with both rats and human beings have proved oysters contained iron and copper in large amounts, Dr. Coulson said.

Both these minerals, he explained, are necessary to produce hemoglobin (a substance in red corpusles which carries oxygen from the lungs) and in forming red corpuscles themselves.

He said one experiment showed "no other commonly used food except liver surpasses the oyster in the amount of iron and copper which it furnishes to the diet in an average serving."

Wanderbirds to Visit Scene Of Chief Powhatan's Villages

Trip to Occoquan Sunday of Unusual Interest for Hiking Club.

By Robert Shosteck.

Sunday the Wanderbirds Hiking Club will hearken back to the days of Capt. John Smith and the great King Powhatan when they visit the sites of the Indian potentate's villages and workshops at Occoquan, Va., and view the old grist mill and mill races which served the Colony of Virginia in the seventeenth century. This trip will include a swim in Occoquan Bay and a walk through the meadows near Woodbridge, which are of botanical interest.

Members of the club and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this trip will meet in front of The Washington Post Building, at Fourteenth and E streets, at 10 o'clock a. m. for this 28-mile bus ride to Occoquan, the fare for which is 70 cents. Reservations for this trip must be telephoned in at National 4200 by midnight Saturday. The hike about Occoquan will be about 5 miles, through level or rolling country except for the half mile to the Falls of the Occoquan.

Leave Buses at Bridge.

The group will leave the buses at the bridge over the creek, walking along the old millrace for about half a mile to the gristmill near the falls. This falls is a good place to eat lunch, since the scenery is exceptionally rugged and an excellent spring is nearby. This old gristmill derived its power from the waterfall, and it was one of several which served Alexandria and other nearby towns in early colonial days. The picturesque village of Occoquan, through which the hikers will walk on the way back to the buses, is located at the head of tidewater, and is the beginning of the old Indian trail to the native copper deposits in Loudoun County, which the Indians worked.

The buses will take the Wanderbirds 3 miles to Woodbridge, where the main hike begins through the Indian country, the former domain of the Tauxenants tribe, a member of the Powhatan Confederacy. The group will follow a dirt road which crosses the tracks at the station. This road runs in the general direction of Deephole Point and Maransco Creek, in the very heart of the flat land swept by bay breezes—the Indian's favorite site for villages.

Meaning of Occoquan.

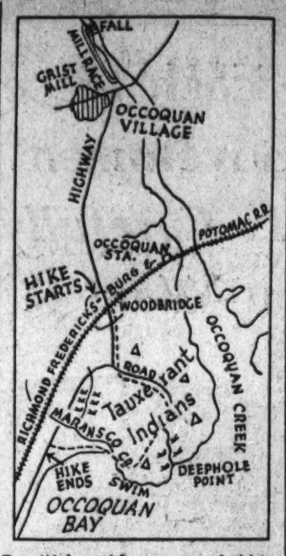
Occoquan is an Algonquin word meaning "curved expansive water," probably referring to the gentle curvature of Occoquan Bay. The Tauxenants tribe, which occupied this region and the area about Mount Vernon, was the northernmost tribe of the confederacy of the great Chief Powhatan and were probably the tribe which gave this region its name.

One result of the ill-fated expedition of Sir Walter Raleigh in 1585 was an interesting book by Hariot describing the Indians of Occoquan and other nearby regions. These tribesmen are described as clothed in loose deerskin mantles and possessing weapons and tools of stone. Small vegetable patches were located nearby, the entire village being surrounded by a palisade to protect the inhabitants against wild beasts or prowling enemies.

Activities Varied.

Besides corn, these Indians raised beans, peas, melons, artichokes and sunflowers. They were excellent fishermen and hunters, trapping game, such as deer and or bows of witch-hazel and maple. They fashioned earthen vessels and crocks for cooking and other household uses. A few of them had crudely fashioned copper weapons, probably exchanged with other inland tribes.

Their villages were generally located near rivers and contained some 10 to 30 rectangular wooden houses, matted with grass and bark hares, which were then plentiful.



Beautiful necklaces were fashioned of bone, native pearl, copper and shells. The Indian women wove baskets and mats, and dried skins.

Not many Indian artifacts remain today, since the ground has been carefully combed by collectors and scientists. However, a number of stone implements, such as arrowheads or tools can always be found in freshly plowed fields. The hikers will be on the lookout for such fields.

Arriving at the shores of Occoquan Bay, the group will go in for a swim for an hour or two. Dr. Ulke, who will lead this hike, will point out several interesting water plants. One, the rare and showy marsh grass pink, grows in shallow water along the shore. The water fern or quillwort is another interesting plant which merits our acquaintance. After the swim, the hikers will follow the bay shore westward for a mile to the village of Featherstone, where the buses will await the group at 6 o'clock for the return trip. The buses will return by 7 p. m.

A Finesse in Time.

Because a superfluity of potential tricks exists, every player must value his hand on a double standard. He must of course know how many tricks he will be able to establish and win, but far more important in his reckoning must be the number of tricks he will have time to win. It is not by any means uncommon that a Declarer, able without difficulty to establish ten or even more winning cards, is faced with the necessity of losing four tricks before his quota of ten can be completed. It is obvious that when the opponents have won four tricks the maximum he can actually take is reduced to nine. The primary consideration must therefore be, not "How many tricks can be won?" but "How many tricks can be won in time?"

In the hand below a clever Declarer snatches a finesse from the very teeth of time—a play which appears at first glance imbecilic, because without risking the finesse he could establish all the tricks he needs, but a procedure which is imperative because the adversaries' attack must be quickly forestalled.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 8 7 6 5 4 ♡ 4 ◇ A 7 4 ♣ K Q 8 5
♠ A 3 ♡ J 6 5 3 ◇ K Q J ♣ J 7 6 3	W E S	♠ 2 ♡ K 10 8 7 ◇ 9 6 5 3 ♣ A 10 4 2
	♠ K Q J 10 9 ♡ A Q 9 2 ◇ 10 8 2 ♣ 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Against the final contract of four spades West makes the excellent Opening lead of the diamond King, thus immediately establishing two tricks to which the Ace of trumps will furnish a certain entry. South wins this trick with Dummy's Ace and sees that by straightforward play the ten tricks he needs for his contract are assured since he can ruff three hearts in the Dummy, win four tricks in spades in his own hand, then complete the requirement with the two red Aces and a club trick. But this does not alter the fact that he has four losing tricks and that nothing can prevent the adversaries from winning them once they obtain the lead, since the diamond stopper is gone and there is of course no way of stopping an Ace. The original plan thus having been proved impracticable because the time element is unfavorable, South must seek some other means of play which will develop ten tricks before more than three tricks can be lost. To effect this end it is necessary to eliminate one losing trick before relinquishing the lead.

The Ace of trumps must of course always be lost, and a club must be lost because there is no long suit in Dummy upon which South's singleton club can be discarded. Only upon a club could South rid himself of a diamond loser, and to set up a club trick the lead must be lost with accompanying disastrous results. By the process of elimination South therefore finds his only hope to be a discard of one of Dummy's diamonds, for which purpose he requires a second trick in hearts. To set up this heart trick a finesse is necessary, seeking to win a trick with South's Queen even though the adversaries hold the King. Thus, despite the fact that South could easily avoid losing a heart trick by simply playing the Ace, he must sacrifice his security in hearts in order to overcome the exigencies of time. To the second trick South therefore leads Dummy's singleton heart, and when East plays low he finesses the Queen. Because of the favorable position of the heart King, the Queen wins and the heart Ace remains to furnish a discard for one of Dummy's losing diamonds. The number of immediate tricks South can lose is thus reduced to three, and he is able to proceed to develop the ten tricks necessary for his contract without fear that they will be sacrificed on one another.

The Deschapelles Coup.

The word "coup" (a French word meaning, colloquially, a clever stroke) has long been used in Bridge, as in all games of the Whist family, to indicate a brilliant play. Various types of all difficult plays are named coups, and because some of them are really obscure, people have a justifiable tendency to think that any Bridge play which is known as a coup is extremely difficult and beyond the scope of the average player. This is not by any means a correct impression.

The mysterious-sounding Deschapelles Coup with its grandiloquent name is nothing else but a prosaic entry-making play. It consists of leading an unsupported high card, deliberately sacrificing the possibility that that card will win a trick, in order to establish an equivalent of that high card in partner's hand as an entry. The only difficulty lies in the fact that the player executing the Deschapelles Coup can not see his partner's honor and thus is taking a chance that his lead may create a winning finesse for Declarer. But in the following example there was so much to be gained if the Deschapelles Coup was successful, that it was entirely justifiable to risk a possible unimportant loss.

North, Dealer.

	♠ K 5 4 ♡ K 6 ◇ A J ♣ A K J 8 7 5
♠ J 3 ♡ J 9 8 5 4 3 ◇ Q 8 2 ♣ 10 2	W E S	♠ 10 9 7 2 ♡ A Q ♡ K 7 4 3 ♣ Q 4 3
	♠ A Q 8 6 ♡ 10 7 2 ◇ 10 9 6 5 ♣ 9 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♠	Pass
3♣	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Against South's three-notrump contract West opened the heart four. South knew that if he played a low heart from Dummy, the Ace would capture the King on the second round, regardless of which opponent held it, so he immediately played Dummy's King in the hope that West held the Ace. East won the trick and then cashed his heart Queen, after which West held four established heart tricks and no apparent entry card with which to make use of them. East could readily understand this, seeing the Aces of diamonds and clubs in Dummy, and assuming that South held the spade Ace because he had bid the suit and later responded to a semi-Force. Being able to stop the club suit, East knew that if by some chance West did hold the spade Ace, he would always have a chance to obtain entry with it, but that if this were not the case, immediate use must be made of the present tempo to establish some side entry for West before the club suit could be set up by South. The solution to the problem lay in employment of the Deschapelles Coup, which was effected in this way:

After winning the first two hearts, East led the diamond King. Suicidal as this may seem in the face of Dummy's Ace-Jack, it definitely destroyed South's chance to make his contract. If South played Dummy's Ace and won the trick, East would inevitably regain the lead with the club Queen and put West in the lead with the now established diamond Queen to run the heart suit. South could not even gain by ducking and allowing the diamond King to hold the first trick, for then a low diamond would force out Dummy's Ace, and the Queen would remain in West's hand to win the third round and furnish entry for the hearts.

The Deschapelles Coup was remarkable enough when played more than a hundred years ago by the great French Whist player Deschapelles. In Whist, remember, there is no bidding and the Dummy is not exposed, so that masterful card reading is required for a player in a position the same as East's in the hand above to reason out the advantage of sacrificing the King. With the exposed Dummy such a play is subject to analysis; in Whist such a play attained the dizzy heights of a master stroke, as remarkable in its way as for a blind man to find his way alone.

	♠ 8 ♡ 7 4 2 ◇ Q 10 7 5 3 ♣ K 9 5 2

Fourth-Place Money Sought By Nats

Winners of Big 1933 Prize Now Battling for Paltry $160 Share.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

NO pot of gold awaits the Nats at the end of the rainbow this season—not even a rainbow, perhaps, if this weather continues. There will be no juicy world series melon to aportion, but there is a bit of small change waiting for the boys if they can kick themselves upstairs into fourth place.

Club Secretary Eddie Eynon, of the Nats, yesterday appraised the value of fourth place at $160 per man—a far cry from the $3,019.86 each Washington regular dragged down last autumn in the classic. But a hundred and sixty smackers is a hundred and sixty smackers in this or any other day, and not to be sneezed at, though it be mere peanut money contrasted to a series cut.

The amount of dough whacked up among the second, third and fourth clubs in each league naturally depends upon the series gate receipts, and the players divide only a certain sum realized on the first four games.

Players Split $284,665.

Last year the boys pocketed $284,665.68. This is how they split it. Ten per cent of the gross was paid to the secretary-treasurer of the National Commission. Seventy per cent of the remainder, $284,665.68, went into a pool for the players. The series participants took 70 per cent of this sum, or in round figures, $200,000.

Six clubs divided the $84,665 in the following manner, 50 per cent to the second-place teams; 33 1-3 per cent to third-place clubs; and 16 2-3 per cent to the fourth-place team.

Members of the second-place teams then received $21,166, or approximately $755 a player. That 33 1-3 per cent cut for third-place players figures into approximately $504 a man, while the fourth-place swag, roughly speaking, simmers down to $147, or just about what Mr. Eynon estimated.

Figures Are Elastic.

The figures are elastic, you understand; they may be a little above or below the estimate, but they will be in that neighborhood. Only gates of more than a quarter million or more fans will influence them to an appreciable extent.

Washington and New York attracted only 163,076 fans in their series last October, the smallest gathering since the Chicago Cubs-Boston Red Sox series of 1918, which drew only 126,483 fans through the turnstiles.

Detroit's Navin Field has a smaller seating capacity than Washington, which can accommodate close to 33,000 persons in a pinch.

So $160 is a fair estimate of what each Nat will receive if the team finishes fourth. Fourth place is their goal and I hope you are not still laboring under the impression that all of that fighting is out of love for the game and principles of clean sport. A hundred and sixty bucks is a hundred and sixty bucks.

Nats and Indians In Double-Header

Whitehill and Burke Hurl Today; Busy Week-End.

Rained out for the second straight day, the Nats this morning are headed for their busiest week-end of the season, with a double-header this afternoon against Cleveland, and tomorrow another against Chicago, and a single game Sunday.

Though no decision had been made yesterday, it was generally agreed that the one game left between Washington and the Indians will be transferred to the Ohio metropolis when the Griffmen go west on their final swing around the circuit. If today's games are rained out at least two of them will go unplayed.

Tomorrow's twin-bill with the White Sox is a synthetic concoction, with Tuesday's game moved up to make it possible. Tuesday, of course will be a day of rest for Cronin's troupe. Mr. C. C. Griffith, who on rainy afternoons dons the mantle of publicity director, announced that Sagebrush Sammy Benson will start Sunday's game, and 'Frisco Cronin chimed in with word that Johnny Stone likely would be back at his old post in right field.

Today's pitching selections—Whitehill and Burke for Washington, and Hudlin and Pearsons, for Cleveland.

Deans Run Up White Flag But Frisch Sticks to His Guns

Ten Days Off Pay Roll Is Verdict of Manager; Paul Shakes Head.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16 (AP).—Dizzy Dean, turbulent pitching star of the Cardinals, ran up the white flag tonight, but Manager Frankie Frisch refused to accept the surrender.

"Ten more days off the payroll," snapped Frisch, as Dizzy, suspended with his pitching brother, Paul, moved for peace.

While Dizzy was ready and anxious to get back in uniform and back on the pay roll, brother Paul remained adamant in his demand that the club rescind a $50 fine plastered on him for his failure to accompany the team to Detroit for an exhibition game Monday. The suspensions followed fines assessed against the brothers.

It appeared tonight that club officials, keeping in mind that Dizzy is the older of the two and has been the leader in their defections from the club, expect him to bring pressure on Paul and bring about a joint return to the squad.

Rain Postpones Women's Net Matches

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP).—Rain, long a hoodoo to the Women's National Tennis Tournament, caught up with the forty-seventh annual championship today, necessitating postponement of the four quarter-final matches.

The postponement brought with it the announcement that the final would be played on Sunday, but even this is indefinite because the prospects for clement weather commencing tomorrow are slim. Forecasters said rain might continue for two days.

All eight players who won their third round matches welcomed the rain, particularly Helen Jacobs, the husky Berkeley, Calif., girl, who is attempting to win the title for the third consecutive year and become the third player to turn the trick since Mollar Mallory and Helen Wills Moody did it.

Old Injury Reappears.

Several days ago Miss Jacobs suffered a painful injury to her left ankle when an automobile door was slammed against the foot. She limped for a while and then neuritis set in. The injured foot gave her a lot of trouble yesterday against Mrs. Mary Greef Harris. To gain secure footing she was given special permission to don spiked shoes.

"My ankle feels a lot better today," she said. "I'm going to stay off it all day in the hope that it will be stronger tomorrow. I've been favoring the foot quite a bit, sometimes too much, and then my game suffers."

Miss Jacobs' opponent in the quarter-finals will be the veteran Elizabeth Ryan, a Californian by birth, but now a resident of London.

Katherine Stammers, the blonde southpaw English girl, and Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, will meet in the featured singles match.

Lopez Fights Allen In Monday Semi-final

Tony (Half Pint) Lopez, sensational Cuban featherweight, has been signed to meet Skippy Allen, of New York, in an eight-round semifinal to the Bob Wilson-Stanislaus Loayza main event at the Riding and Hunt Club next Monday.

Lopez showed with indifferent success at the Twin Cities Arena, Laurel, last year, and Allen created a decided hit in his initial appearance here, when he lost a disputed decision to Carl Guggenia at the Hunt Club two weeks ago.

Archery Record Set.

Storrs, Conn., Aug. 16 (AP).—Richard Hoogerhyde, of Bristol, Conn., 1932 champion, set a new single American round record today as he came from behind to take the lead for the men's National archery title. He sent 90 arrows to the target for a total of 722 points.

St. Louis, Aug. 16 (AP).—After nosing out the Phillies, 4 to 3, for an eleventh-inning victory in the first game, the St. Louis Cardinals this afternoon ran up a 7-to-2 score in the nightcap, to sweep a double-header.

Bell Winner Over Wood In 3 Sets

Parker and Grant Also Triumph; Stoefen-Lott Team Advances.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16 (AP).—Through no fault of the officials who made the draw, the Newport Casino Tennis Tournament today narrowed down to the outstanding pairs of feudists of the current Eastern grass campaign.

After four days of listless competition, this classic was reduced to a semifinal round that pitted Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., last year's runner-up, against Berkeley Bell, of New York, and Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., against the new National clay court champion, Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, Ga.

The Davis Cup star, Sidney Wood, of New York, today encountered Bell and was eliminated, 6—4, 6—1, 6—3.

Defeats Van Ryn.

Allison gained the second last round with his second straight victory in a week over Johnny Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, his doubles partner of long standing, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2.

Parker dropped only four games as he vanquished Hall, 6—1, 6—2, 6—1, today. Grant became a semifinalist yesterday when he outlasted the higher ranked Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., in the most punishing five-set match of the tournament.

This historic competition came down to the semifinals with four of the original ten seeded players surviving. Allison, runner-up to Shields last year, was ranked third, behind Shields and Wood. Bell was seeded fifth, Parker sixth and Grant seventh.

Steady Rain Falls.

Just before Bell and Wood ended their one-sided duel, a light but steady rain started and continued all through the afternoon. Despite the dampness, four doubles matches, three of which were quarter-finals battles, were run off.

Annarita Wins Detroit Sixth by Six Lengths

Detroit, Aug. 16 (AP).—Given a canny ride by Jockey Hank Manifold, Annarita took command of the situation when ready today to win the sixth race at the Detroit Fair Grounds by 6 lengths. Socialite was second and No Doubt third.

Fifth at the quarter pole, Annarita was in front at the three-quarters and the filly was in no danger thereafter. Socialite set the early pace, but was no match for the winner. Annarita paid $9.60, while place tickets on Socialite were worth $10.40. The race was over the 1-mile route.

Here's a Grid Team That'll Have Color

Boston, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Pat Hanley, new head coach of football at Boston University, is going to have a team that has lots of color, whatever its playing strength.

Hanley, brother of Coach Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, has ordered a uniform of golden satin pants with carmine insets on the back of the legs, jerseys of vivid scarlet with white chest facing and red bottle-cap helmet with white trimmings.

KidChocolate Facing Test Tonight

Meets Sarilla, a Man Who Has Reputation as Hard Puncher.

WHAT manner of cannon fodder is being fed Kid Chocolate, is the question most generally asked when Phineas F. and Phoebe Phightphan enter into a discussion of the Chocolate Bon Bon's ten-round fight with Andre Sarilla at Griffith Stadium tonight.

According to the record, Sarilla is not fodder and the only cannons ever associated with him are a pair of heavy-walloping fists that have earned him recognition as one of the hardest punching lightweights around New York.

Many near-great, good and not-so-good fighters are numbered among those who have fallen a victim to the Sarilla slam. He won on a technical knockout from Jimmy Britt in the fourth round in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., about two years ago. Billy Brown he stopped in one round. Al Belmont he chopped to pieces to earn a technical knockout in five rounds. Danny Allen lost to him on a decision. Frankie Cavanaugh he stopped in four. Oscar Bass lasted one round. Nick Bensa lasted less than three rounds against him in Spain. Pasquale Bonifigula, the Argentinean champion, he stopped in ten rounds. Irish Bobby Brady and Jerry Carnera earned draws with him and Gaston LeCarde, the French sensation is numbered among the few who have decisioned him.

Has Chance to Climb.

A former stable mate of Panama Al Brown, generally recognized as bantamweight champion of the world, Sarilla believes the fight with Chocolate will elevate him in one leap to the top of the fight and featherweight ladder. He has been training long and loud in New York for the bout and believes he has achieved his top form at a time when Chocolate is just a bit short of the condition that once made him the greatest of all colored boxers.

Chocolate concluded his training routine for the bout at the Twelfth street Y. M. C. A. yesterday and will rest today until ring time. He is expected to weigh around 132 pounds—his best fighting weight.

Canada Lee Faces Perry.

Young Canada Lee, an outstanding New York featherweight, will face Bobby Perry of Atlantic City in an eight-round semifinal. In a six-round preliminary, Speedy Dixon, local lightweight, will be given another chance to crash the big time against Young Kid Buffalo a lightweight from Chester, Pa.

One other six and a four will complete the card of 34 rounds.

Woodstock, Culpeper Nines to Clash Today

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Woodstock will face the strong Culpeper nine for the last time this season here tomorrow. Lefty Childs will get the mound duty for the locals, according to Manager Forsythe, while it is believed that Walter Beall, former New York Yankee twirler, will be on the hill for the league-headers. Culpeper has defeated Woodstock in every game so far this season.

The local nine has one more league encounter, meeting Harrisonburg at Harrisonburg Saturday, but several exhibition games have been scheduled.

Yacht Colony Stirred By Cup Race Politics

Former Secretary of Navy Charles Francis Adams pictured at the helm of his Yankee, leading candidate to defend the America's Cup against the British yacht Endeavour. Reports that the Rainbow will be selected by the committee to race the British boat despite Yankee's superior record, have aroused the Newport yacht colony.

Newport Sees Snubbing of Adams' Yankee in Favor of Rainbow.

Cards Are Stacked, Boat Fans Believe

Former Navy Secretary May Withdraw if His Yacht Isn't Named.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16 (U.P.). Avast, mates! Grab a belaying pin and man the foredeck—there's rebellion afoot in this quiet cove!

Newport's common folk—more than might be suspected in this metropolis of seaport swank—are in the uprising to a man. It seems there is skulduggery in the wind over the choice of the defender of the America's Cup against Tom Sopwith's British challenger next month.

As far as racing trials go, the Boston lugger, Yankee, is hull down on the rest of the fleet in the three-cornered contest to decide what boat will defend the world's most prized seagoing silverware. But racing tests, it appears, do not count for so much.

Has Won Only Once.

The Vanderbilt syndicate's Rainbow, a streamline job with more fancy gadgets, self-starting boom swingers and electrical knick-knacks than a transatlantic liner, has scored only one win over the Back Bay sloop. That was today.

But the New York Yacht Club's pride is to be the choice, no matter which wins the trials, the salty brethren say. And the inhabitants of this port are rooting for the Yankee to a man.

Walkout Hinted.

They point to statements of the cup race officials that the present skirmishes are "observation" tests—not real races. The way the boats sail, not how fast they sail, will be the determining point, they say, all of which has caused many an ear to be cocked windward.

It is even hinted Charles Francis Adams, who sails the Yankee, and the whole Boston group may quit the New York yachting clique in a body if the Boston entry is sidetracked in selecting the defender.

Popularity Hurt.

The Vanderbilt entry's popularity was not enhanced when Harold Vanderbilt, Rainbow's master, pulled out of the race Wednesday with Rainbow far behind, and had his craft towed in. Most yatchamen finish, no matter how far behind they are, the seagoing people here point out.

Rainbow scored its first win over Yankee in the Astor Cup race today, apparently aided by 2 tons added to her ballast last night. Yankee, Vanitie and Weetamoe trailed over the 28-mile course.

For the first time in history of America's Cup campaigns, Sopwith's Endeavour, British challenger, sailed astern of the American yachts, and apparently had little difficulty holding the pace.

Wins After Protest.

A tangle at the start of the race which the Rainbow won today over the Yankee resulted in the Rainbow flying a protest flag. The Rainbow claimed the Yankee violated the right of way, and it was forced to bear off.

The Rainbow led the Yankee at the finish of a 38.5 mile triangular course by about 6½ minutes. Vanitie was third.

Yanks, Citing Breaks, Deny Tigers 'Are In'

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP).—Almost every one but the Yankees, it seemed today, concedes that the Detroit Tigers have demonstrated they possess too much power to be dislodged from their stranglehold on the American pennant lead.

The New Yorkers, somewhat battered and bruised, are five and a half games down to the pace-setters with about six weeks of campaigning to go but they feel confident they turned the tide in yesterday's victory over the Bengals and they will pursue their recovery program in the double-header tomorrow which winds up the crucial series.

Today's rain, washing out the fourth game for the time being, was greeted with loud cheers by the athletes in both camps.

Broaca's Pitching Tonic.

"The Tigers are good," commented Joe McCarthy, the usually silent pilot of the Yankees, "but they haven't clinched the pennant yet. Mickey Cochrane's club got plenty of breaks in running up 14 straight. It is just beginning a tough trip around the East and may be due for a slump. The Yankees are not out of it, not by a long shot. We have a long home stand that should bring the club back to its best. Johnny Broaca's fine pitching yesterday was one of the tonics we needed. There's one thing you can depend on—the Yankees will keep fighting."

"We'll keep bearing down," countered Cochrane, "and win every game we can. I'm not claiming the pennant yet myself, but I don't see how this ball club of ours is going to be stopped, the way it's hitting."

Cochrane said he planned to start Elden Auker, his freshman pitching star, in the first game of tomorrow's double-header. He is undecided whether to start Vic Sorrell, one of his veterans, or give the sensational schoolboy, Rowe, another crack at the Yankees in the second game.

Rowe Has "Indian Sign."

Rowe won handily on Tuesday for his thirteenth consecutive victory, and has appeared to have the "Indian sign" on the New Yorkers.

Johnny Murphy, former Fordham University right-hander, and Lefty Gomez probably will be McCarthy's pitching choices. Gomez is anxious to gain revenge for the trouncing he took in the opening game of the series when the Tigers knocked him out of the box.

The three games of the series so far have drawn close to 100,000 spectators. If the weather clears for tomorrow's twin bill, the Yankee Stadium may be the scene of another capacity or near-capacity gathering. More than 25,000 fans were turned away the first day.

Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig especially welcomed a day of rest. Lou is all patched up with adhesive tape and has a spike wound just above one knee as a reminder of Tuesday's hectic double-header. The Babe, who has slid three times so far into home plate and scored once, also is bruised up from his heroic efforts.

Welsh and McElvenny Enter Net Semi-finals

Minneapolis, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Barney Welsh and Ralph McElvenny, Washington, D. C., stars, were a formidable doubles team today as they scored a straight-set victory over Simons and Donohue, of Louisville, in the National Public Parks Tournament. The victory, at 6—1, 6—2, 6—4, put the District pair in the semifinal round.

Ex-Hurler Sentenced.

Philadelphia, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Arthur Summers, 49, former Detroit American League Club pitcher, was sentenced today to two years in the county prison for violating his parole. Summers was placed on probation for two years in July after pleading guilty to charges of passing worthless checks. On August 8 he was arrested on similar charges, and pleaded guilty again today.

'Little Ringer, What Now?'—Gallico to Barrie

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—There was an item in the newspapers the other day which read that my friend Peter Christian Barrie has been apprehended by the Pinkertons at Saratoga, cast into the local donjon keep and is there being held in durance vile, pending examination before a judge as to why he was removing a mare named Easy Sailing from the barn of one Jack Galvin of Brooklyn.

This explanation will be a very interesting one especially if Peter Christian Barrie, better known as Paddy Barrie, tells the whole story about the lady horse known as Easy Sailing. Paddy claims that it is his horse, and that he was merely removing his own property, or rather the property of a lady friend, Ethel, who was also clapped into the jug with him, but later was released on bail. In fact, Paddy came and told me he was going to take or "hoist" the horse before he did so, just to see what would happen.

Paddy is a very curious man. He is the self-confessed "ringer" of the famous Shem-Aknahton case at Havre de Grace, and many others. He claims to have been an intimate friend of the later Sir Edgar Wallace, and I believe him, since Barrie has never lied to me, and he was just the type that Wallace would have liked. Wallace was mad about the turf and Barrie gave him inspiration for many a crook story. Barrie did time in Dartmoor for a racetrack fraud. They claim that he is still wanted in England, though I doubt that. For the last three years he has been the tool of the gangsters of New York, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Chicago, the only man who could disguise a horse so cleverly that it would fool the vets and the officials of the various jockey clubs.

I met him some three years ago through Bob McGarry, who wrote the story of his "ringing" coups on the American turf and thereafter kept meeting him in the most unusual places.

He borrowed $80 from me once to get him out of a little trouble. I gave it to him and kissed it bood-by, but figured it was cheap enough at that. He had given me most of the information I had used in a magazine article on the rigging of races, and especially the use of narcotics at the tracks, a subject on which he was an expert. The article was ferociously attacked and condemned by turf people the country over. But four days after it appeared on the stands the Federal men made their famous narcotic raid on the Arlington track in Chicago, arresting 14. The stuff Barrie gave me stood up. And Barrie did, too. He brought the $80 back.

There were times when Paddy was broke, and others when he was flush. He paid back the eighty, though this left him broke at the time, and then vanished. I didn't see him for a year. Then one night at a big outdoor prize fight I saw the familiar figure with the red cheeks and the black hair sitting in a ringside seat.

Doing a Little Better.

We shook hand and said hello, and I asked him how he was going. He said: "Oh, all right. I'm doing a little better now." Later he showed me what he meant. He had 15 $1,000 bills pinned to the inside of his vest. Then he vanished again to paint Lord knows what horses at what tracks. Certainly he never was inactive.

Last spring, or rather in March,

Carry Over, 1-to-2 Favorite, Wins Easily by Five Lengths at Narragansett Park

Wheatley Ace Goes Mile in 1:40 3-5

Legender Runs Second; Panorama Is Third, 4 Lengths Back.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 16 (AP). Carry Over, a winner for the Wheatley Stable at Saratoga, came down to Narragansett today and made a show of four other 3-year-olds in the mile feature at the Rhode Island course.

Bounding to the front at the half-mile post, the son of St. Germans, trained by Jim Fitzsimmons and ridden by Willie Saunders, pulled away until at the end he held a five-length advantage over B. N. Kane's Legender, which had been campaigning in the claiming ranks at the Spa. H. P. Headley's Panorama lost the place by four lengths, while C. V. Whitney's Rhadmanthus and C. T. Grayson's Knight of Old brought up the rear.

Carry Over was the 1-to-2 choice and he easily justified the short odds, running the distance over a slow track in 1:40 3-5 with 115 pounds in the saddle.

My Blonde Disqualified.

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—My Blonde, racing for Mrs. R. Sullivan, of Chicago, galloped home ahead of her field in the 5½-furlong feature at Hawthorne today, but got nothing but exercise, when she was disqualified for fouling Slim Rosie.

Slim Rosie darted to the front and held on until My Blonde, piloted by Dublin Taylor, overhauled her at the head of the stretch. Taylor got My Blonde past the wire by three lengths over the Southland Stable's Sage Girl, but the stewards decided she had bumped Slim Rosie in close quarters.

Sage Girl, an outsider, moved up to first place, with Lovita and Slim Rosie getting the other shares of the purse.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Narragansett, Aug. 16.

The hard-luck spell that Clocker Mike has been holding over me eased up somewhat today, and I was able to push home a pair of winners, although the accompanying mutuels were nothing to write your Aunt Sadie about. The rain came up and several of my selections were not improved by that fact. However, as I have said before, two a day keeps the boss away. I see by the papers that Maryland has changed its claiming rule making it necessary to run a horse before being eligible to make a "claim." Personally, I believe the new rule will work against the game. True, the "halter brigade" has stepped in now and then and grabbed off a man's horse. On the other hand, in some cases wealthy men have become interested in racing through gaining a favorite horse through the claiming box. The rule will make it easier to work some of the claiming "agreements" which have obviously existed between certain stables.

BILL.

First race—Cardamon should make full use of this opportunity to escape the maiden ranks. This is a fair sort of juvenile, according to Clocker Mike. Saunders is scheduled to do the piloting. Golden Time will draw a lot of mutuel backing. Liebchen is well fancied in some circles, but that outside post may hurt his chances.

Second race—Kai-Finn seems favored by this short route. May be hustled to the front at the start and hold command all the way. Wedding Ring appears to have the edge over the others. Merovech his a fighting chance, especially on an off track.

Third race—I understand that Clocker Mike tried to put over Reigh Rose while I was vacationing. I agree with him that this one may take down this purse. Portfolio and Allotment are deserving of money mention.

Fourth race—Morning Mail has impressed in his recent appearances and belongs on top of this field. Peters is slated to ride and any price will be a good one. Happy Helen and New Flag can battle it out for the place money.

Fifth race—Curacao and Bitty Bit seem destined to fight it out for the main money in this mile and a sixteenth test. Both are fit as hands can make them. Source Circle has been whispered to me as a possible surprise here. Breaks off the rail and should Haines be aboard looks for this one in the thick of it. Adobe Post may score, but I can't see what the excuse would be for the form reversal.

Sixth race—Portcodine has been groomed for a race of this sort and I'm stringing along. Not a standout but one with a chance on best races. Calome and Baboo for the rest.

Seventh race—Wirt G. Bowman, Pernickerty and Black Patricia to finish in that order in the finale. Mud would move Black Patricia on the front end of the group.

Rosedale Wins Playground Swim Title

Scores 58 Points in Final Meet; Georgetown Is Second, With 50.

THE swimming team representing Rosedale Playground amassed the greatest number of points in the finals of the boys' city championships, held yesterday in the Monument Pool, winding up the annual swimming competition of the Municipal Department of Playgrounds. The Georgetown boys finished second with 50, and the Monument team was third, with 17.

J. Dering Wins Free Style.

J. Dering, captain and coach of the Rosedale squad, won the unlimited free style race, but failed to equal his former record of 16 1-5 seconds for the distance. In the unlimited relay, the Municipal quartet pushed the winning Rosedale team on every lap, Dering beating A. Farrell at the finish by inches only.

Weather permitting, the boys' city finals for colored playground honors will be held this afternoon in the Howard pool at 2:30.

Rassling Bouts Postponed to Thursday

Rain Forces Garibaldi and Szabo to Wait a Week to Renew Feud.

District wrestling fans, who already are complaining because they do not get enough of their favorite sport since boxing has forced the muscle-twisters to keep out of Griffith Stadium every other week, were disappointed when the weather man forced a postponement of last night's scheduled bouts. With boxing listed in the Nats' apple orchard tonight, Promoter Joe Turner was forced to wait until next Thursday before bringing the matmen back into action.

So Sandor Szabo, the Hungarian Adonis, and Gino Garibaldi, the thor-hammering Italian, who were listed to maul each other in the feature fracas, will have another week in which to add to their hatred for each other. According to the press agents' reports, Szabo has been waiting six years for this particular bout to get back at Gino, whom he charges scrambled one of his shell-like ears. And Gino, who did not like some of Szabo's remarks, promises to cauliflower the other ear just as soon as he gets the chance.

This particular bout already has been clinched for next Thursday and Turner hopes he can line up the postponed card in its entirety.

Rowe Credits 13 Wins in Row To Girl He'll Marry This Fall

Will Wed His School-Day Sweetheart After World Series.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (U.P.). "How come those 13 straight wins?" was the question fired at the long, tall pitcher in the brown suit who is known to the National pastime as "Schoolboy" Rowe.

"Cherchez la femme," replied the Arkansas traveler.

"No, thanks; don't smoke cigars."

"You don't get me, came back the Tigers' ace flinger—the illustrious addict of pot likker, greens, hominy and hot cakes. "I'm trying to tell you in Mickey Cochrane's French that a mighty pretty gal is largely responsible for my pitchin' success this season."

"You mean——"

"Yes," young Lynwood Thomas Rowe nodded, all smiles.

"Well, well — congratulations. When did this secret marrigae occur?"

Lynwood, who had deposited his 6 feet 4½ inches on a mezzanine divan in the Hotel New Yorker, leaned forward with a frown. "I'm not married. You're away ahead of me. I'm trying to tell you that I'm planning a wedding right after the world series."

"Congratulations, anyway. Who's the girl?"

Her name, the elongated fireball thrower confessed, is Miss Edna Skinner, attractive 21-year-old brunette of Rowe's home town, Eldorado, Ark. Just a year younger than Lynwood, and his school-day sweetheart. "Been keepin' company more'n six years," he said.

Bass at Work For Sarron Bout Here

Plans to Be at Best for Griffith Stadium Feature on August 27.

BENNY BASS, the "Little Polson of the Prize Ring," returned to Philadelphia yesterday from a short vacation in Atlantic City and immediately took up the long, hard grind of reaching the perfect condition he thinks necessary to achieve a decisive victory over Pete Sarron, with whom he tangles for ten rounds at Griffith Stadium a week from next Monday.

The training grind of the Philadelphia Fish would have started earlier but for a cut received in his recent winning fight with Johnny Jadick, his perennial rival. The cut was reopened in his first workout for the Sarron bout, which originally was scheduled for August 13 and forced Bass to undergo a short period of enforced idleness and the consequent postponement of the "natural" until August 27.

Sarron Hard at Work.

Sarron has been working steadily for the past month at the Green Oaks Tavern. Always requiring more than the ordinary amount of prefight boxing, he has trained hard and faithfully for this bout, which is the first of a series he hopes will carry him to the featherweight title. A win over Bass will automatically advance him to within hailing distance of the N. B. A. diadem, now perched securely atop the boyish thatch of Southpaw Freddy Miller, and Sarron is very confident of his ability to evade the Philadelphia Flash's lethal right hand long enough to pound out a decisive win.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEDDY CARL, $32.40, $16.50, $10.20; VALISE, $38.20, $16.30; BLUE BUBBLE, $19.40.

TEDDY CARL, prominently placed from the beginning, moved up fast after leaving the back stretch, wore down ON OUR WAY and drew out steadily through the stretch. VALISE worked his way up steadily and came with a rush through the stretch. BLIND PRAISE moved up gradually in the last three furlongs, swung wide at the stretch head and closed with good speed in the closing furlong. ON OUR WAY had speed from the outset, but weakened badly inside the last sixtenth. TARBUCKET, a trailer early, closed with a rush through the stretch when too late. HOGANS FOX saved ground in the stretch and held on well at the end. COLORIST well placed the first three-sixteenths, dropped back steadily thereafter. SLAY BOY never entered into contention. DOUBLETON, unruly at the post, lacked speed. BLUE BUBBLE, away slowly and outrun for the first three furlongs, closed with a rush in the final quarter mile.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:07. Winner, A. A. Baroni's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CASH SURRENDER, $3.90, $3.30, $2.70; LINE OF FIRE, $6.30, $3.40; QUEEN, $4.10.

CASH SURRENDER followed in closest pursuit of the pace established by STAR QUEEN, wore down the latter approaching the stretch and was drawing out and never seriously threatened. LINE OF FIRE, away fast, began moving up after racing three furlongs and closed stoutly in the stretch, though unable to seriously endanger CASH SURRENDER. STAR QUEEN had most early speed, drew into a lead in the opening quarter mile, but weakened in the last quarter and had to be sharply ridden out to hold the show safe from LIQUEUR. The latter, well up while under restraint early, came extremely wide into the stretch and was going gamely at the end. PEACOCK ALLEY was never a factor. BABY CHORD trailed throughout, failing to show any semblance of speed.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:36. Winner, Mrs S. H. Fairbanks' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUGLAS F., $4.70, $3.30, $3.10; WILROB, $3.30, $2.90; BATTLING KNIGHT, $4.60.

DOUGLAS F. went to the front in the opening strides, withstood a determined bid from WILROB a quarter mile from home and drew out steadily thereafter. WILROB made a bold effort to reach the leader, but was not good enough, though holding safe the place. BATTLING KNIGHT, restrained early, swung to the outside at the stretch head and closed gamely, though unable to reach the leaders. PLAYFUL MARTHA, away fast, lacked speed to hold her position, but finished with good energy in the closing quarter mile. PANA FRANKA, well up, saved ground, but weakened in the last quarter mile. EREBUS was unable to enter into contention at any stage of the journey. The others were never prominnt.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:05. Winner, Mrs. T. Hunt's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZORANA, $14.90, $7.30, $4.30; MUMSIE, $4.50, $3.80; ST. STEPHENS, $3.40.

ZORANA gained a slight advantage in the opening quarter mile, withstood a determined bid from CANTERSINE and, withstanding a determined effort from MUMSIE outlasted the latter at the finish. MUMSIE, a prominent factor from the outset, fought it out valiantly and was catching the winner at very stride at the finish. ST. STEPHENS, restrained early, closed willingly under pressure through the closing furlong. WAR LETTER, outrun early, closed with good speed through the last quarter mile. DUSTINA never could reach the leaders. POSTSCRIPT was never prominent. CANTERSINE faltered from her efforts of trying to get to the front in the opening half mile.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. The Strand Cup. For 3-year-olds and upward. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:35. Winner, Wheatley Stable's b. c (3), by St. Germans—Portasse. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:49, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARRY OVER, $3.00, $2.80, $2.50; LEGENDER, $5.00, $3.00; PANORAMA, $3.70.

CARRY OVER, away well, fought it out with KNIGHT OF OLD for the first half mile, disposed of the latter and, roused at the stretch head, drew out readily for the remainder of the way. LEGENDER, restrained early, moved up stoutly leaving the back stretch, but was unable to reach the winner despite being placed under punishment. PANORAMA, restrained early, saved all possible ground, but was no match for the leading pair. RHADAMANTHUS, trailer early, made up some ground. KNIGHT OF OLD displayed keen speed in the going, but weakened badly in the closing five-sixteenths.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at once. Winner Mrs R. T. Flippen's ch f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLD SPELL, $5.00, $3.70, $2.60; BRIGHT BIRD, $13.40, $4.50; BOGAP, $2.50.

COLD SPELL sailed along in closest attendance of the pace, came to the outside of the leaders in the stretch and responded gamely to hard urging, outlasted BRIGHT BIRD at the end. The latter took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along in front under slight restraint and, despite fighting it out gamely all the closing furlong, was unable to resist the closing challenge of the winner. BOGCAP, well up, was unable to keep pace and dropped back steadily the last quarter mile, though easily accounting for the show position. YAP, well up, was unable to improve his position under punishment in the last quarter mile. SISKO went evenly. BOY CRAZY was outrun. HIGH SOCKS never entered contention.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OLD JUDGE, $5.30, $3.50, $2.40; BYLONA, $6.30, $3.20; BURNING UP, $2.80.

OLD JUDGE, a prominent factor from the outset, disposed of KOTERITO and, hard ridden at the end, outlasted BYLONA at the close. The latter, permitted to go remain off the early pace, came with splendid courage through the stretch and just failed to get up in time. BURNING UP, also a factor, was slightly when between horses going to the first turn and a trailer until the last quarter mile, closed with good speed in the stretch run. KOTERITO had good speed, but weakened in the stretch, was hampered slightly by BYLONA, but was beaten at the time. STEPBROTHER, well placed early, weakened steadily in the closing quarter mile.

Post Association Week-Day Interleague Title Play Starts September 5

Best District Nines Seek Honors

THE Post Association Week-day Interleague championship series, which brings into city-wide competition all the week-day leagues in organized sandlot baseball, will swing into action on September 5 on the South Ellipse diamond, it was decided at a meeting at The Post last night. Indications point to one of the most closely contested battles for the city week-day crown of the past decade, as several of the teams, now engaged in titular struggles in the various leagues, rank among the strongest nines ever developed on local sandlots.

Participating in last night's meeting were Walter Shomo, of the Departmental League; Thomas Mullenburg, of the Department Store League; William Flester, of the Industrial League; Vic Gauzza, of the Federal League; Forrest Burgess, of the Georgetown Church League; George Link, of the National Capital League, and Burt Shipley, of the Maryland Suburban League. They agreed to a two-game elimination series, placed the officiating of the games in the hands of the District Umpires Association, and ruled that all teams must use only the players who were on the teams' rosters during the regular season.

Bleachers for Fans.

Through the cooperation of the Department of Public Buildings and Parks, it is planned to rope off the South Ellipse field and install temporary bleacher seats. A minimum admission charge will be made to defray the competing teams' expenses and the balance will go toward the maintenance of a hospital fund for injured players of The Post Association.

Grace A. C., winner of the Georgetown Church loop, is the only nine to reach the interleague series play. Heurich Brewers and Pig 'n Whistle are staging a furious feud for pennant honors in the Industrial League, and Investigation and Government Printing Office probably will struggle for supremacy in the Departmental loop. Center Market and Acacia, two other top-notch aggregations, will initiate the National Capital League championship series today and Adjutant General Office and G. P. O. Federals begin their series for the Federal League crown on Thursday.

Kann's Hot Favorite.

Kann's is a strong favorite to clinch the Department Store title within the next two weeks, and College Park, Beltsville and Animal Husbandry, challengers for the Maryland Suburban League pennant, will finish their race by August 25.

The Post Association series among these survivors, representing the class of 40 week-day teams, will be productive of the real and only champion of District sandlot baseball.

The pick of the U. S. Army's polo players, summoned to Washington yesterday to prepare for the international match with the Mexico army team next month. Left to right (standing), Lieut. Edwin H. Walker, Lieut. George H. Read, Capt. C. E. Davis, Lieut. John H. Stadler and (sitting) Maj. C. C. Hall.

FIVE of the finest polo players in Uncle Sam's Army, the quinet that probably will represent the Army in the international matches with the Mexican Army team next month, yesterday took up a temporary residence in Washington.

Through the maze of offices and desks, in the far-flung Munitions Building, photographers trooped to be greeted by the pick of the polo players summoned here to stave off the challenge of the Mexicans.

To polo players they need no introduction, but to the lay sports fan they are Capt. C. E. Davis and Maj. C. C. Smith, both members of the U. S. team that won two out of three games from the Mexicans in Mexico City last year; Lieut. George H. Read, jr., a native Washingtonian, and Lieut. John H. Stadler, the most dashing and hardest-riding duo on the team.

Walker Fifth Man.

The fifth member of the squad is Lieut. Edwin A. Walker, three years out of West Point, who is receiving his baptism in international play and who is the wise-cracker of the group.

The five who arrived yesterday have not been definitely named to represent the United States in the matches which will give the Capital a franchise in the big leagues of polo, but their selection is believed probable. The selection committee, headed by Maj. J. M. Swing, is expected to make the final selection within two weeks in order to give the players ample time to coordinate their team work.

Lieut. Stadler was named to the team which has just finished a rapid succession of hard matches in the New York vicinity and Long Island as a replacement for Lieut. C. N. McFarland, considered the outstanding No. 2 player in the Army, who was seriously injured in the junior matches on Long Island. His position on the team to be selected is generally regarded as the least secure of any of the group, as Lieut. C. H. Reed and Lieut. George Grunert both are outstanding competitors for the No. 2 position.

Beat Hitchcock Team.

The Army quintet has on its record a victory over Tommy Hitchcock's hard-riding team, whom the soldiers beat by one goal six weeks ago. Hitchcock had Jock Whitney, Sonny Whitney and an English star named Aster playing with him, but found the officers too tough a combination to last.

Capt. Davis, bald and 44, and Maj. Smith, grizzled and hard as nails, are the balancing force of the team, but concede nothing to the younger players in point of condition. Capt. Davis worked his way up from the ranks. Lieut. Read, husky and wide-shouldered, did likewise. Lieut. Read gives Western High as the only school he ever attended, because he says it is the only school he was never "kicked out of." He is 34.

Built Like Iron.

Lieut. Stadler, 31, is much smaller than Read, but another tough-looking individual. Lieut. Walker is built like a tall, powerful heavyweight boxer.

Capt. Davis said the Mexican team had furnished some stubborn opposition to the Army team's visit to the neighboring country, and he and his fellow officers admitted deep respect for the ability of the Southerners.

"When you get right down to it, though," said Capt. Read, "we're not worrying much about who'll win the series."

Luckless Fishermen's Newest Alibi Is—Delphinine Cetacean

In other words, if friend wife is slightly taken aback at this novel explanation of the fruitfulness of your best endeavors, you can hasten to explain that:

The delphinine cetacean of the genus Phoceana in plain, ever-day language is a porpoise with whom the hook and line finny tribes are seeking no personal contact; in fact, it is the nature of every species of salt water fish to put as much space as possible between themselves and the delphinine cetacean of the genus Phoceana with no questions asked.

The authority for all this is Joe Chauncey, Alexandria, Va., merchant, who recently returned from a futile fishing trip to Newport News and Ocean City where several schools were seen for several days working inshore. Which is another way of saying there was little fishing in the premises while the visitors held the spotlight.

Porpoises (and if you insist on your Webster, peer-puses) have no distinct beak or rostrum. They are dusky above, white below, about five feet long and, if you like it very technical, piscivorous. Otherwise, their streamlines are regular.

Porpoises are raiders of the deep seas and sometimes in their raiding they attack one of their own herd. With their sharp tusks ugly wounds are quickly produced and, according to Chauncey, a wounded member of the flock is soon chased from the feeding grounds and left close inshore to die.

A delphinine cetacean of the genus Phoceana and food fish are things apart. A cousin to the sea lion or a diminutive whale in its own right, it rolls along, daily doing its acrobatics seemingly for its own entertainment and the passing fancy of a possible spectator.

Cubs and Braves Split Twin Bill

Chicago Wins 3-2 in 10th; Drops Second, 6-1.

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—The second-place Chicago Cubs failed to gain on the league-leading New York Giants today as they split a double-header with the Boston Braves before a crowd of 25,000. The Cubs won the first game, 3 to 2, in ten innings, but dropped a 6-to-1 decision in the nightcap to remain four games back of the champions, who were rained out at Pittsburgh.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

WE are told that the large hardhead are gone, just about gone, or words to that effect. But I do not agree. On October 7, 1928, the writer and Capt. Raub Drury, fishing 8 miles out of St. Jeromes Creek, in the Deep Hole, landed 17 croakers as large as they come in the bay. That's why I do not agree.

Yet, speaking generally, the hardheads come into the bay every year during the month of May and they depart for their winter habitat off the coast of North Carolina during September. By October 1 the majority of them have left our waters. Between Hooper Island and Northwest Middles you will find these big fellows until October.

Joe Chauncey, merchant, of Alexandria, fishing with C. H. Powell, of Baileys Cross Roads, Va., and Andrew Cornelius and three others Wednesday night across the channel from Kenwood Beach, in that famous spot known as The Goose, landed 25 micropogons (largest croakers) in about 30 minutes.

Fished but an Hour.

They started fishing about 8 o'clock, the fish started biting about 8:30, the storm came up and drove them from the grounds at 9 o'clock, but they landed their 25 hardhead before they left. They were out in one of the Woodward boats from Kenwood.

Chauncey spent last week-end at Ocean View, Va., and he says fishing down that way had been poor for several days. The natives attributed the break in the sport to several schools of porpoises that had worked close inshore for several days.

He says a school of these graceful oddities of the fish family was seen out from Kenwood Beach recently. And he thinks the temporary lull in fishing activities at that place might have been caused by the presence of the visitors. He is of the opinion that if boatmen would fish close inshore while porpoises are around, success would crown their efforts. He thinks the fish come close in for protection.

Capt. Henry C. Egloff, of Walter Reed Hospital, fishing with his buddy for 30 years, Thomas Waddy, merchant of Alexandria, landed more than 125 croakers last Saturday and Sunday mornings at Piney Point, Md. They were stopping at the Tolson Hotel, Piney Point, and Capt. Charlie, their "one and only" guide took them to the grounds.

These fishermen drift. Two weeks ago they landed their big ones across the river. This time they found only small ones at that place, and their big ones were landed on this side of the river between Tall Timbers and the Point. They kept and iced down 125 of their largest, 3 and 4-pounders, and the rest they gave away to others stopping at the hotel.

A letter from Capt. Brady R. McKay, St. Jeromes Creek, August 12, tells us that fishing in the Point Lookout grounds is rising to supreme heights.

"We are catching some very nice blues at Northwest Middles," he says, and then continues:

Big Blues Hauled In.

"C. E. Rabbitt, of Washington, with three others, fishing with me Saturday, August 11, caught 40 large blues, weighing 5 to 7 pounds. We were trolling at Northwest Middles and we lost a lot of our tackle. There were many of them.

"Capt. Willoughby and his son, each with a party, made good catches at Northwest Middles Saturday. Last week I caught 37 blues off Point Lookout. They were not so large, but would average 2 pounds.

"On Friday, August 10, George Beck, of Washington, with two others, caught 31 nice trout and lots of hardheads and a few blues, still-fishing outside of Point No Point Lighthouse. They were fishing with me."

A splendid report from Tall Timbers says large croakers, Norfolk spot and blues are plentiful. Details later. Capt. Dick Rogers' report, Piney Point, is held in reserve.

Post Association Week-Day Interleague Title Play Starts September 5

THE Post Association Week-day Interleague championship series, which brings into city-wide competition all the week-day leagues in organized sandlot baseball, will swing into action on September 5 on the South Ellipse diamond, it was decided at a meeting at The Post last night. Indications point to one of the most closely contested battles for the city week-day crown of the past decade, as several of the teams, now engaged in titular struggles in the various leagues, rank among the strongest nines ever developed on local sandlots.

Participating in last night's meeting were Walter Shomo, of the Departmental League; Thomas Mullenburg, of the Department Store League; William Flester, of the Industrial League; Vic Gauzza, of the Federal League; Forrest Burgess, of the Georgetown Church League; George Link, of the National Capital League, and Burt Shipley, of the Maryland Suburban League. They agreed to a two-game elimination series, placed the officiating of the games in the hands of the District Umpires Association, and ruled that all teams must use only the players who were on the teams' rosters during the regular season.

Bleachers for Fans.

Through the cooperation of the Department of Public Buildings and Parks, it is planned to rope off the South Ellipse field and install temporary bleacher seats. A minimum admission charge will be made to defray the competing teams' expenses and the balance will go toward the maintenance of a hospital fund for injured players of The Post Association.

Grace A. C., winner of the Georgetown Church loop, is the only nine to reach the interleague series play. Heurich Brewers and Pig 'n Whistle are staging a furious feud for pennant honors in the Industrial League, and Investigation and Government Printing Office probably will struggle for supremacy in the Departmental loop. Center Market and Acacia, two other top-notch aggregations, will initiate the National Capital League championship series today and Adjutant General Office and G. P. O. Federals begin their series for the Federal League crown on Thursday.

Kann's Hot Favorite.

Kann's is a strong favorite to clinch the Department Store title within the next two weeks, and College Park, Beltsville and Animal Husbandry, challengers for the Maryland Suburban League pennant, will finish their race by August 25.

The Post Association series among these survivors, representing the class of 40 week-day teams, will be productive of the real and only champion of District sandlot baseball.

The pick of the U. S. Army's polo players, summoned to Washington yesterday to prepare for the international match with the Mexico army team next month. Left to right (standing), Lieut. Edwin H. Walker, Lieut. George H. Read, Capt. C. E. Davis, Lieut. John H. Stadler and (sitting) Maj. C. C. Hall.

FIVE of the finest polo players in Uncle Sam's Army, the quinet that probably will represent the Army in the international matches with the Mexican Army team next month, yesterday took up a temporary residence in Washington.

Through the maze of offices and desks in the far-flung Munitions Building, photographers trooped to be greeted by the pick of the polo players summoned here to stave off the challenge of the Mexicans.

To polo players they need no introduction, but to the lay sports fan they are Capt. C. E. Davis and Maj. C. C. Smith, both members of the U. S. team that won two out of three games from the Mexicans in Mexico City last year; Lieut. George H. Read, jr., a native Washingtonian, and Lieut. John H. Stadler, the most dashing and hardest-riding duo on the team.

Walker Fifth Man.

The fifth member of the squad is Lieut. Edwin A. Walker, three years out of West Point, who is receiving his baptism in international play and who is the wise-cracker of the group.

The five who arrived yesterday have not been definitely named to represent the United States in the matches which will give the Capital a franchise in the big leagues of polo, but their selection is believed probable. The selection committee, headed by Maj. J. M. Swing, is expected to make the final selection within two weeks in order to give the players ample time to coordinate their team work.

Lieut. Stadler was named to the team which has just finished a rapid succession of hard matches in the New York vicinity and Long Island as a replacement for Lieut. C. N. McFarland, considered the outstanding No. 2 player in the Army, who was seriously injured in the junior matches on Long Island. His position on the team to be selected is generally regarded as the least secure of any of the group, as Lieut. C. H. Reed and Lieut. George Grunert both are outstanding competitors for the No. 2 position.

Beat Hitchcock Team.

The Army quintet has on its record a victory over Tommy Hitchcock's hard-riding team, whom the soldiers beat by one goal six weeks ago. Hitchcock had Jock Whitney, Sonny Whitney and an English star named Aster playing with him, but found the officers too tough a combination to last.

Capt. Davis, bald and 44, and Maj. Smith, grizzled and hard as nails, are the balancing force of the team, but concede nothing to the younger players in point of condition. Capt. Davis worked his way up from the ranks. Lieut. Read, husky and wide-shouldered, did likewise. Lieut. Read gives Western High as the only school he ever attended, because he says it is the only school he was never "kicked out of." He is 34.

Built Like Iron.

Lieut. Stadler, 31, is much smaller than Read, but another tough-looking individual. Lieut. Walker is built like a tall, powerful heavyweight boxer.

Capt. Davis said the Mexican team had furnished some stubborn opposition to the Army team's visit to the neighboring country, and he and his fellow officers admitted deep respect for the ability of the Southerners.

"When you get right down to it, though," said Capt. Read, "we're not worrying much about who'll win the series."

Luckless Fishermen's Newest Alibi Is—Delphinine Cetacean

In other words, if friend wife is slightly taken aback at this novel explanation of the fruitfulness of your best endeavors, you can hasten to explain that:

The delphinine cetacean of the genus Phoceana in plain, ever-day language is a porpoise with whom the hook and line finny tribes are seeking no personal contact; in fact, it is the nature of every species of salt water fish to put as much space as possible between themselves and the delphinine cetacean of the genus Phoceana with no questions asked.

The authority for all this is Joe Chauncey, Alexandria, Va., merchant, who recently returned from a futile fishing trip to Newport News and Ocean City where several schools were seen for several days working inshore. Which is another way of saying there was little fishing in the premises while the visitors held the spotlight.

Porpoises (and if you insist on your Webster, peer-puses) have no distinct beak or rostrum. They are dusky above, white below, about five feet long and, if you like it very technical, piscivorous. Otherwise, their streamlines are regular.

Porpoises are raiders of the deep seas and sometimes in their raiding they attack one of their own herd. With their sharp tusks ugly wounds are quickly produced and, according to Chauncey, a wounded member of the flock is soon chased from the feeding grounds and left close inshore to die.

A delphinine cetacean of the genus Phoceana and food fish are things apart. A cousin to the sea lion or a diminutive whale in its own right, it rolls along, daily doing its acrobatics seemingly for its own entertainment and the passing fancy of a possible spectator.

Cubs and Braves Split Twin Bill

Chicago Wins 3-2 in 10th; Drops Second, 6-1.

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—The second-place Chicago Cubs failed to gain on the league-leading New York Giants today as they split a double-header with the Boston Braves before a crowd of 25,000. The Cubs won the first game, 3 to 2, in ten innings, but dropped a 6-to-1 decision in the nightcap to remain four games back of the champions, who were rained out at Pittsburgh.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

WE are told that the large hardhead are gone, just about gone, or words to that effect. But I do not agree. On October 7, 1928, the writer and Capt. Raub Drury, fishing 8 miles out of St. Jeromes Creek, in the Deep Hole, landed 17 croakers as large as they come in the bay. That's why I do not agree.

Yet, speaking generally, the hardheads come into the bay every year during the month of May and they depart for their winter habitat off the coast of North Carolina during September. By October 1 the majority of them have left our waters. Between Hooper Island and Northwest Middles you will find these big fellows until October.

Joe Chauncey, merchant, of Alexandria, fishing with C. H. Powell, of Baileys Cross Roads, Va., and Andrew Cornelius and three others Wednesday night across the channel from Kenwood Be[illegible], in that famous spot known as The Go[illegible] landed 25 micropogons (largest croakers) in about 30 minutes.

Fished but an Hour.

They started fishing about 8 o'clock, the fish started biting about 8:30, the storm came up and drove them from the grounds at 9 o'clock, but they landed their 25 hardhead before they left. They were out in one of the Woodward boats from Kenwood.

Chauncey spent last week-end at Ocean View, Va., and he says fishing down that way had been poor for several days. The natives attributed the break in the sport to several schools of porpoises that had worked close inshore for several days.

He says a school of these graceful oddities of the fish family was seen out from Kenwood Beach recently. And he thinks the temporary lull in fishing activities at that place might have been caused by the presence of the visitors. He is of the opinion that if boatmen would fish close inshore while porpoises are around, success would crown their efforts. He thinks the fish come close in for protection.

Capt. Henry C. Egloff, of Walter Reed Hospital, fishing with his buddy for 30 years, Thomas Waddy, merchant of Alexandria, landed more than 125 croakers last Saturday and Sunday mornings at Piney Point, Md. They were stopping at the Tolson Hotel, Piney Point, and Capt. Charlie, their "one and only" guide took them to the grounds.

These fishermen drift. Two weeks ago they landed their big ones across the river. This time they found only small ones at that place, and their big ones were landed on this side of the river between Tall Timbers and the Point. They kept and iced down 125 of their largest, 3 and 4-pounders, and the rest they gave away to others stopping at the hotel.

A letter from Capt. Brady R. McKay, St. Jeromes Creek, August 12, tells us that fishing in the Point Lookout grounds is rising to supreme heights.

"We are catching some very nice blues at Northwest Middles," he says, and then continues:

Big Blues Hauled In.

"C. E. Rabbitt, of Washington, with three others, fishing with me Saturday, August 11, caught 40 large blues, weighing 5 to 7 pounds. We were trolling at Northwest Middles and we lost a lot of our tackle. There were many of them.

"Capt. Willoughby and his son, each with a party, made good catches at Northwest Middles Saturday. Last week I caught 37 blues off Point Lookout. They were not so large, but would average 2 pounds.

"On Friday, August 10, George Beck, of Washington, with two others, caught 31 nice trout and lots of hardheads and a few blues, still-fishing outside of Point No Point Lighthouse. They were fishing with me."

A splendid report from Tall Timbers says large croakers, Norfolk spot and blues are plentiful. Details later. Capt. Dick Rogers' report, Piney Point, is held in reserve.

Stocks Creep Upward in Dull Session

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Holding in a narrow range, stocks edged moderately higher in dull trading today.

Speculative markets were overshadowed by broad strength in bonds. While the recovery in United States Government obligations tapered off, other sections of the investment market scored further good gains.

With inflation talk sidetracked, markets scanned the horizon for signs of autumn business recovery. Strength in bonds was accepted as an indicator of improvement in confidence and hopes revived for a moderate seasonal pick-up in trade activity next month.

Demand for stocks converged upon communication, motor, tobacco, railroad shares and specialties. Gains were general through the list, but the so-called inflation stocks were not prominent on the advance.

Turnover Increases.

Turnover in stocks increased to 610,120 shares compared with 574,750 yesterday. Early strength lacked follow-through and the market reverted to a quiet drift before the close.

The Standard Statistics average for 90 stocks moved up five-tenths of a point to 72.3, with industrial shares hovering around the tops of the recent narrow trading range.

Western Union and Radio preferred B were outstanding among communication shares and closed more than 2 points higher. There was no special news to explain strength in that division, although payment of the regular American Telephone dividend yesterday may have helped. American Telephone was up more than a point at one time and finished one-half point higher. Postal Telegraph preferred spurted for a net gain of 1½ points.

The Government's housing program and the spirit of cooperation manifested by some large banks inspired more buying of building shares. American Radiator, U. S. Gypsum and Congoleum extended their previous gains fractionally.

Strong Spots.

Among individual strong spots, American Agricultural Chemical, American Safety Razor, Chrysler, Hercules Powder, Liggett & Myers and New York Air Brake rose 1 to about 4 points. Meat packing shares were firm on the continued strength of pork and live stock prices. New York City traction shares made further gains. United Carbon moved only fractionally higher in face of declaration of a quarterly dividend of 60 cents on the stock, compared with 44 cents previously.

*Ex dividend.

Foreign Markets.

London, Aug. 16 (AP).—Quietness prevailed on the stock exchange today, but the undertone was good. Industrials were steadily supported on dividend anticipations, while silk-edge securities were subdued. Gold mining shares eased, but transatlantic issues held firmer. The rest showed irregularity.

Paris—In a slow session on the bourse today call rentes were active and rose slightly. Elsewhere trading was steady.

Berlin—Brisk rains at the start of the session marked the general improvement in the bourse today. The closing was stagnant but sustained.

Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 16 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agrl). A fair-sized quantity of graded strictly combing and blood territory wool has been taken out of the market. The price realized was on the low side of the recent reported range of 73@75 cents scoured basis.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Unless Owners of Foodstuffs Are Able to Work in Concert There Should Be No Danger of Profiteering This Winter.

By Ralph West Robey.

Everyone will agree that if on top of all our present troubles we were subjected to profiteering in the sale of foodstuffs there would be ample justification for drastic action on the part of the Government. From this point of view the assurances of the Administration that it will guard against profiteering are encouraging. One can not help but wonder, however, what the basis of the profiteering will be, and, further, just how the Government proposes to prevent it, granting the underlying economic conditions make it possible. The evidence, it seems to me, indicates that the Administration is worrying about a nonexistent danger, or, at least, a danger that quickly could be made nonexistent.

In the first place, there is not, according to official estimates, any possible food shortage in sight. In spite of the heavy losses from the drought we still will have ample supplies of all the basic foodstuffs to carry us through the winter without hardship. Past surpluses assure that. If there is to be profiteering, therefore, it must be against a background, not of a shortage, but of an adequate supply to meet our needs at a reasonable price.

Profiteering Is Not Easy When Supply Is Adequate.

Now, it may be granted, it is possible to have profiteering even when there is an adequqate supply of a commodity. Nevertheless, it is not an easy operation. So long as there is a sufficient supply to meet the customary demand, prices will not advance to the point where profiteering can be charged unless someone is able to keep the supply from coming on the market. In other words, some one person, or a group of persons acting in concert, must have what amounts to a corner on the supply. Otherwise competition between the various holders of the commodity will keep a steady supply flowing on to the market.

This does not mean, of course, that there will be no holding back on the part of sellers. On the contrary, with the prospect of prices going higher and higher, there will be a strong tendency to delay selling. There is a limit, nevertheless, to how far this can be carried. Some of the holders will have to sell because they have to have money. Others will sell because they will recognize that since the supply is adequate to meet the demand at a reasonable price, they run a constant risk of the market being broken at any time by a sudden dumping of the holdings of some of those that have delayed selling.

Must Assume Holders Are Prepared to Work Together.

Fear that there will be any significant profiteering in foodstuffs this winter, therefore, must be based upon the belief that the holders of commodities are prepared to work in concert. It must be assumed that they are prepared, in effect, to work as a monopoly, feeding out their holdings at a rate that will yield them the maximum profits.

I do not believe that there is any particular basis for such a fear. Some people will hold back in their selling, and prices will be higher, but that scarcely can be called profiteering.

If the danger is more than this it means that the opportunities for monopolistic control are even greater than the public realizes. It means that rules and regulations have been approved by the Administration that put consumers at the mercy of sellers. If there is any genuine danger of profiteering this winter, therefore, it would appear that the Administration would scarcely need to go beyond the confines of Washington to protect the public against it. All that it will need to do is to restore competition.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Average Three Millions Higher

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended August 15, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks was $2,466,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $236,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

On August 15 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,468,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $35,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with the Federal Reserve banks, of $9,000,000 in money in circulation and of $5,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, offset in part by increases of $22,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $18,000,000 in Treasury and National bank currency.

There was practically no change in the system's holdings of bills discounted, bills bought in open market and United States bonds. An increase of $14,000,000 in holdings of United States Treasury notes was offset by a decrease in holdings of Treasury certificates and bills.

Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended August 15, 1934, were as follows:

Stocks Creep Upward in Dull Session

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Holding in a narrow range, stocks edged moderately higher in dull trading today.

Speculative markets were overshadowed by broad strength in bonds. While the recovery in United States Government obligations tapered off, other sections of the investment market scored further good gains.

With inflation talk sidetracked, markets scanned the horizon for signs of autumn business recovery. Strength in bonds was accepted as an indicator of improvement in confidence and hopes revived for a moderate seasonal pick-up in trade activity next month.

Demand for stocks converged upon communication, motor, tobacco, railroad shares and specialties. Gains were general through the list, but the so-called inflation stocks were not prominent on the advance.

Turnover Increases.

Turnover in stocks increased to 610,120 shares compared with 574,750 yesterday. Early strength lacked follow-through and the market reverted to a quiet drift before the close.

The Standard Statistics average for 90 stocks moved up five-tenths of a point to 72.3, with industrial shares hovering around the tops of the recent narrow trading range.

Western Union and Radio preferred B were outstanding among communication shares and closed more than 2 points higher. There was no special news to explain strength in that division, although payment of the regular American Telephone dividend yesterday may have helped. American Telephone was up more than a point at one time and finished one-half point higher. Postal Telegraph preferred spurted for a net gain of 1½ points.

The Government's housing program and the spirit of cooperation manifested by some large banks inspired more buying of building shares. American Radiator, U. S. Gypsum and Congoleum extended their previous gains fractionally.

Strong Spots.

Among individual strong spots, American Agricultural Chemical, American Safety Razor, Chrysler, Hercules Powder, Liggett & Myers and New York Air Brake rose 1 to about 4 points. Meat packing shares were firm on the continued strength of pork and live stock prices. New York City traction shares made further gains. United Carbon moved only fractionally higher in face of declaration of a quarterly dividend of 60 cents on the stock, compared with 44 cents previously.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Unless Owners of Foodstuffs Are Able to Work in Concert There Should Be No Danger of Profiteering This Winter.

By Ralph West Robey.

Everyone will agree that if on top of all our present troubles we were subjected to profiteering in the sale of foodstuffs there would be ample justification for drastic action on the part of the Government. From this point of view the assurances of the Administration that it will guard against profiteering are encouraging. One can not help but wonder, however, what the basis of the profiteering will be, and, further, just how the Government proposes to prevent it, granting the underlying economic conditions make it possible. The evidence, it seems to me, indicates that the Administration is worrying about a nonexistent danger, or, at least, a danger that quickly could be made nonexistent.

In the first place, there is not, according to official estimates, any possible food shortage in sight. In spite of the heavy losses from the drought we still will have ample supplies of all the basic foodstuffs to carry us through the winter without hardship. Past surpluses assure that. If there is to be profiteering, therefore, it must be against a background, not of a shortage, but of an adequate supply to meet our needs at a reasonable price.

Profiteering Is Not Easy When Supply Is Adequate.

Now, it may be granted, it is possible to have profiteering even when there is an adequqate supply of a commodity. Nevertheless, it is not an easy operation. So long as there is a sufficient supply to meet the customary demand, prices will not advance to the point where profiteering can be charged unless someone is able to keep the supply from coming on the market. In other words, some one person, or a group of persons acting in concert, must have what amounts to a corner on the supply. Otherwise competition between the various holders of the commodity will keep a steady supply flowing on to the market.

This does not mean, of course, that there will be no holding back on the part of sellers. On the contrary, with the prospect of prices going higher and higher, there will be a strong tendency to delay selling. There is a limit, nevertheless, to how far this can be carried. Some of the holders will have to sell because they have to have money. Others will sell because they will recognize that since the supply is adequate to meet the demand at a reasonable price, they run a constant risk of the market being broken at any time by a sudden dumping of the holdings of some of those that have delayed selling.

Must Assume Holders Are Prepared to Work Together.

Fear that there will be any significant profiteering in foodstuffs this winter, therefore, must be based upon the belief that the holders of commodities are prepared to work in concert. It must be assumed that they are prepared, in effect, to work as a monopoly, feeding out their holdings at a rate that will yield them the maximum profits.

I do not believe that there is any particular basis for such a fear. Some people will hold back in their selling, and prices will be higher, but that scarcely can be called profiteering.

If the danger is more than this it means that the opportunities for monopolistic control are even greater than the public realizes. It means that rules and regulations have been approved by the Administration that put consumers at the mercy of sellers. If there is any genuine danger of profiteering this winter, therefore, it would appear that the Administration would scarcely need to go beyond the confines of Washington to protect the public against it. All that it will need to do is to restore competition.

Bond Market Is Advanced Three-tenths

Prime Investments, Federals Steady; Sales Total $9,371,000.

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Continued buying of lower priced corporate issues carried many railroad and utility loans 1 to 2 points higher in today's bond market.

There was a steady tone in prime investments and United States Governments.

Transfers approximated $9,371,000 par value, compared with $12,360,000 on Wednesday and the Standard Statistics Co. average of 60 domestic corporate loans advanced three-tenths of a point to 83.5.

Federal Sales Fall.

The turnover in Government bonds amounted to only $2,770,000, compared with $6,630,000 the day before.

Although top prices of the day were shaded slightly in the final hour of trading, advances of 1 to 2 points were well scattered throughout the lower priced group, including "Nickel Plate" 6s, which closed 2 points higher, at 60; Boston & Maine 5s, 3 higher, at 77, and St. Paul 4¼s of '89, 2 higher, at 59. Other substantial gainers included some obligations of American & Foreign Power, Chicago & Northwestern, Columbia Gas & Electric, Interborough Rapid Transit, International Telephone, Postal Telegraph, Manhattan Railway, Lehigh Valley Coal, New Haven, North American Edison, Texas & Pacific, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Western Maryland and Utah Power & Light.

Prime investment issues participated in the upturn to a greater extent than was the case in the past two sessions, with gains of as much as a point recorded by West Penn Power 5s at 112; St. Paul Union Depot 5s at 110; Public Service Electric & Gas 4s at 102¾, and Liggett & Myers 5s at 114½.

Reflecting the smallest turnover in nearly a week, the Government list moved within a comparatively narrow range, but with one or two exceptions closed one thirty-second to six thirty-seconds higher.

Farm Mortgage Yields.

Federal farm mortgage 3¼s, which had a sharp runup in the past two days, yielded two thirty-seconds at 100.26, but Treasury 3¼s of '44-46 closed six thirty-seconds higher at 102.16. Home Owners Loan bonds were minor fractions higher.

Further improvemennt in Argentine issues featured the foreign section, which was generally quiet and little changed from the previous day.

Curb Remains In Doldrums; Slight Gain

Fluctuations Are Narrow; Transfers Advance to 114,000 Shares.

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The curb market remained in the doldrums today. Minor improvement was the rule. Only a few scattered specialties showed variations of more than a point at the close.

Both Swift & Co. and Swift International moved up fractionally in active dealings. Other shares closing slightly higher included American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Newmont, Wright Hargreaves, International Petroleum, Humble Oil and Sherwin-Williams. Greyhound-Corporation ended off a shade.

Transfers approximated 114,000 shares, compared with 101,000 on Wednesday.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Average Three Millions Higher

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended August 15, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks was $2,466,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $236,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

On August 15 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,468,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $35,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with the Federal Reserve banks, of $9,000,000 in money in circulation and of $5,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, offset in part by increases of $22,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $18,000,000 in Treasury and National bank currency.

There was practically no change in the system's holdings of bills discounted, bills bought in open market and United States bonds.

An increase of $14,000,000 in holdings of United States Treasury notes was offset by a decrease in holdings of Treasury certificates and bills.

Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended August 15, 1934, were as follows:

Wheat Values At Standstill; Advances Lost

Market Closes Unchanged to 5/8 Higher; Corn and Oats Decline.

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—Virtual wiping out of material new advances of grain values today accompanied late reports the Department of Agriculture would attempt to check speculation in commodities.

Decided enlargement of pressure to sell became quickly evident following the reports indicating likelihood of Administration measures for increased governmental regulating of grain trades. Word of beneficial moisture in Argentina acted also as a late bearish influence.

Closes Steady.

Retreating from a maximum fresh rise of 2⅝ cents a bushel, wheat closed steady at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅛ gain, corn ⅞ off to ¼ up, oats varying from ⅜ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions showing 12 to 30 cents climb.

Surprising strength shown today by wheat prices at Liverpool and Rotterdam, with talk of threatened strike troubles in Argentina, did much to lift Chicago grain markets until late reactions took place.

It was pointed out that labor difficulties in Argentina were likely to interrupt to a serious extent the shipment of grains from that country, and to enlarge transatlantic demand for wheat from North America.

Belief was also prevalent early that the wheat market here was well liquidated, following five days of declining prices, and that pessimistic views about the Washington Administration's attitude toward grain traders were without much warrant.

Flour Business Rises.

Transient broadening of wheat futures purchasing received further impetus from reports that flour business Southwest had materially increased. An additional stimulating factor was that September delivery of wheat in Minneapolis had risen to a steep premium over Chicago, with millers here paying as much as 7 cents over Steptember for immediate delivery of No. 1 hard wheat.

Need of soaking general rains to allow seeding in domestic winter wheat territory was likewise given stress. All such factors, however, were practically lost sight of during rapid price setbacks at the last.

Corn and oats paralleled the action of wheat. Heavy rains in the corn belt were a bearish factor, despite assertions that the rains came generally too late to benefit the corn crop.

A new peak price today for hogs was largely responsible for provision market upturns.

Staples' Rise Seen Based on Demand Aid

Despite Inflation Furor, Old-Fashioned Factors Are Called Best.

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Despite all the recent furor about inflation in the speculative commodity markets, the advance which has carried several staples to the highest levels in three or four years appears to have been based on old-fashioned demand and supply factors.

Artificial influences such as control measures have played their part, but any general advance such as might be expected to arise from distrust of the purchasing power of money has not been evident in the past three months.

Effects of Drought.

A large part of the advance in the more sensitive commodity price indices may be attributed largely to the effects of he drought.

Of the 15 sensitive staples used in Moody's Daily Index, the outstanding gains since May 1 have occurred in corn, wheat and hogs

Next is cotton, and this staple is yielding the smallest crop this year since 1921, due to a combination of adverse weather and crop restriction.

The fifth biggest rise, however, comes not as result of a cut in the supply, but an increase in demand. This occurred in silver, and is traced to the Treasury's silver purchase program.

Raw Sugar Gains.

Raw sugar is the sixth commodity to show a striking gain and this is in good part attributed to the controls set up under the Costigan-Jones act signed last May, as well as reduced supplies.

Of the remaining nine staples used in this index, six have declined since May 1, and only three have advanced. Most of the changes in this group of nine are moderate.

A sharp decline, however, has occurred in hides, and this, like the sharpest gains mentioned above, results from the drought, for the shortage of feed crops has hastened the slaughter of cattle. The moody index itself stood at 150.5 on August 15, compared with 132.4 on May 1.

The figure is based on December 31, 1931, as 100, and is weighted to allow for relative importance of the various commodities included in the compilation.

Peach Packing to Give 1,000 Work

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Picking and packing of Albemarle's $250,000 peach crop will require the services of approximately 1,000 laborers during the next two or three weeks, according to orchardists at Crozet. A survey last year showed this labor was obtained chiefly from Albemarle and the adjoining counties of Nelson and Greene.

The Crozet-Greenwood section will ship 90 per cent of the Virginia crop this year because of adverse conditions in the Rockingham orchards, said Chesley Haden. This will run nearly 250 carloads at $1,000 per car, when figured at the rate of $2 per bushel.

The Georgia Belles are maturing first and are bringing from $2 to $2.50 on the Eastern markets. Small growers who deal through jobbers are receiving about $1.35, but the bulk of the crop will come from large orchards which sell directly to chains and other large distributors.

The cool weather in the first part of the month has slowed up maturity of the fruit about ten days, but a number of packing houses already have been busy with the Belles and first Elbertas. The Hale variety will follow these in marketing order.

The Georgia-Carolina market has practically cleaned up its crop of peaches and the Albemarle fruit will be in large demand until the Maryland and Pennsylvania fields start shipping.

The Elbertas will bring around 10 cents more per bushel on the market than the Belles, the former being quoted today at $2.25 and the latter at $2.15.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The Sun Pipe Line Co., subsidiary of the Sun Oil Co., has arranged to call its entire issue of $3,500,000 of 5 per cent sinking fund debentures on October 2, at 101½ plus interest. The bonds were to mature in 1940.

A committee representing first lien bonds of the United Public Utilities Co., a subsidiary of United Public Service Co., has asked for a deposit of a sufficient number of additional bonds to give effect to a plan of reorganization under section 77-B of the bankruptcy act. The Federal Court of Northern Illinois has taken charge of the company's property, the committee tated, and has tentatively declared the proposed plan fair and equitable.

Date Is Shifted For National Capital Open

Kenwood's $2,000 Golf Tourney Moved Up to October 6 and 7.

THE National Capital Open golf championship, held for the past three years during November, will be played on October 6 and 7 at Kenwood Golf and Country Club in order to make possible the appearance of the six American stars who will participate in an extensive campaign in Australia.

Confirmation of the dates was made yesterday by Al Houghton, Kenwood professional, and Bob Harlow, tournament manager of the National P. G. A. Bureau, who suggested the switch from November to October to insure the presence of such famous players as Olin Dutra, National Open ruler; Paul Runyan, P. G. A. title holder, and defending champion in the National Capital; Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Denny Shute, Leo Diegel and Ky Laffoon.

Originally the dates for this year's event had been planned for the second week in November preceding the annual Mid-South Open at Pinehurst, as has been the case since the tournament was inaugurated back in 1931.

Splits Two New Tourneys.

The National Capital will be sandwiched in between two other money tournaments—the Columbus (Ohio) Open and the $5,000 Louisville (Ky.) Open, both events new on the P. G. A. tournament schedule. Immediately following the Louisville tournament the six selected United States pros will embark for Melbourne, Sydney and other Australian points to compete in tournaments having cash prizes totaling $40,000. They will not return until December.

Notices will go out in a few days announcing the 54-hole National Capital Open. There will be $2,000 in cash prizes, the first being $600.

Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, tournament chairman at Washington Golf and Country Club, scored a 59-49—90-14—85 yesterday over her home course to take a 1-stroke lead over a field of 26 women. Mrs. R. N. Hutton, with 102-16—86; Mrs. C. B. Stewart, 104-18—86; Mrs. W. F. Draper, 104-18—86; Mrs. P. A. McLendon, with 114-28—86, and Mrs. C. H. Merillat, with 107-21—86, were tied for second. Mrs. G. C. Roney, with 111-21—90, and Mrs. J. S. Payne, with 118-28—90, were next in line. The remaining 18 holes will be played today.

Dettweiler Shoots 78.

Playing from the extreme back tees and through a driving rain, Billy Dettweiler, younthful Congressional golfer, scored a 78 yesterday at Five Farms in a tune-up round for next Tuesday's National Amateur sectional trials. Dettweiler played with Roland Mackenzie, who shot a 75, and Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, who did an 84. They will return today.

A goodly number of the 25 District entrants in the amateur trials will invade Five Farms today for practice rounds. Luther Steward, jr., of Congressional; Harry Pitt, of Manor; Maury Nee, of Columbia, will play together with Maestro Fred McLeod. Roger Peacock, Louis Fuchs, Levi Yoder and Dr. Larry Otell, all of Indian Spring, will make up a foursome. The course is open today, tomorrow, Sunday and Monday for practice rounds.

Wood and Stoefen Sectional Leaders

Named No. 1 for East-West Play August 18-19.

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Sidney Wood, of New York and Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles, Davis Cup players, were named No. 1 men, respectively, on the Eastern and Western squads announced today to meet in the annual intersectional tennis clash at Orange, N. J., August 18 and 19.

The Eastern team will be chosen from Wood, Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J.; Berkeley Bell, New York; Frankie Parker, Spring Lake, N. J.; J. Gilbert Hall, New York; Manuel Alonzo, New York, and John Van Ryn, Philadelphia. Van Ryn will compete only in doubles.

The Western squad is composed of Stoefen, George Lott, Chicago; Jack Tidball, Hollywood, Calif.; Gene Mako, Los Angeles; Donald Budge, Los Angeles, and Robert Bryan, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Then matches will consist of six singles and three doubles encounters. Julian S. Myrick and Alrick H. Man, both of New York, are nonplaying captains of the East and West respectively.

Two Pittsburgh Aces To Enter Catholic U.

The only two Pittsburgh youths to make the Pennsylvania all-scholastic football team last season are headed for Catholic University. Charley Munhall, captain of the South Hills High School eleven, and Ed Mugele, captain of the Mount Lebanon High School team, are the boys.

Munhall is a half back and a crack shot-putter. He holds the interscholastic shot-put record of 52 feet. Mugele, a lineman, also is a boxer of no mean ability. He was runner-up last winter in the 175-pound class of Pittsburgh's Golden Gloves tournament.

Post's Predictions

Main event—Kid Chocolate, Cuba, vs. Andre Sarilla, Panama, lightweights; 10 rounds. Rated X. If Chocolate has returned to a semblance of old-time form and Sarilla is as good as he is rated, this bout deserves a better rating. Chocolate is still too good for most featherand lightweights and should stop Sarilla.

Semifinal—Young Canada Lee, New York, vs. Bobby Perry, Atlantic City, featherweights; 8 rounds. Rated C. Lee has the class and should handle Perry pretty much as he chooses.

Preliminaries—Young Kid Buffalo, Chester, Pa., vs. Speedy Dixon, Washington, lightweights; 6 rounds. Rated E. Dixon has little but a burning ambition and should be easy pickings for Buffalo unless he is extinct.

Alexandrians Planning for Football

Rivals Battling for Use of Baggett's; Eagle Nine at Quantico Tomorrow.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 16 (Spl.).—Rival factions are already beginning to make arrangements for the use of Baggett's Stadium for football. It is the only local inclosure where admission fees can be collected.

The Celtics, under the leadership of Theodore Beach and Rube Hayman, the latter a former University of Virginia star, are planning to place a crack outfit on the field to represent Alexandria. The majority of the players are to be local, but some added strength will be recruited from Washington.

The reorganization of the Fraters is also in the making.

Eagles at Quantico.

The Alexandria Eagles invade Quantico Saturday afternoon for a game with the Indians. Jimmy Blake, speed-ball artist, will do the flinging.

The Eagles will be bolstered for the contest, having added Ellett Cabell, Schriener and Hamilton for the remainder of the campaign for Saturday games.

The Columbia Fire nine of this city would like to arrange a game with a Firemen's team of Virginia or Maryland, to be played at Baggett's Stadium here either of the following dates, September 1, 2, or 3. Manager Billy Padgett is handling the Firemen's schedule and can be reached at Alexandria 1774. The Bethesda and Vienna Fire nines are especially challenged.

Celtics at Rockville.

Jimmy Titcomb or Joe Garvey will pitch for the St. Mary Celtics Sunday at Rockville. Archie Scrivner, the Celtics' regular flinger, will be working in a Valley League game.

Alexandria Police and Columbia Firemen meet next Monday at Baggett's in the deciding game for second half honors in the Commercial loop.

Gallico

I went down to Augusta, Ga., to see Bob Jones play in the Masters' Tourney. One night my phone rang and I recognized Barrie with the faintest of cockney accents. It was Paddy. He came over and we had a drink and I said, "For Pete's sake, what are you doing here?"

He said, "I'm training some horses over at Aiken and playin' a little polo with the society folk."

"Good gosh, they don't know who you are, do they?" I asked.

"Oh, no," Paddy said. "They think I'm some Englishman over here training race horses."

And this while the Pinks were still looking for him all over the country.

Was Very Indignant.

Not long ago, Paddy came up to my house and told me the story of Easy Sailing, the mare he was caught hoisting at Saratoga and which I can not print or elaborate upon until it becomes a matter of court record, which, no doubt, will when Paddy comes to trial—if he does. Paddy maintained that he had been bilked and was very indignant about it, like all larceny artists when they themselves are finally taken. What I never could understand was why Barrie would jeopardize his liberty to get square for a grievance, real or fancied. The general consensus now is that while they may not be able to prove the horse-stealing charge on Barrie and the girl, they will be able to hold Paddy for deportation to that dear England.

This I should greatly regret, as Paddy is a constant source of joy and interest. I cannot think of him as any very great villain, since he confines his operations strictly to the turf. He is a clever scamp, too, because with a great detective force on the lookout for him for three years, he has managed to carry on his business of painting one horse to look like another and to run it at this track and that. And if he did steal that mare at Saratoga, as charged by the Commonwealth, you must admit he did it in a novel way. He drove up with a van in broad daylight, with never a weapon showing and ordered the horse brought forth and stowed. What next, little ringer?

Charles Town Horse Show, Races Marred by Downpour

Only 4 of 11 Classes Judged; Whitney Horses Take 3 Events; Frances Cooper Wins Feature of Day's Flat Racing Program.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Aug. 16 (Spl.).—The twenty-second annual Charles Town Horse Show and races were practically rained out today after a heavy downpour yesterday and a steady rain during the morning.

Of the 11 classes scheduled for today only four were judged. In the heavy draft division horses from Llangolen Farms, Upperville, Va., owned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, were awarded all three prizes.

All jumping classes scheduled for this afternoon were canceled because of the inclement weather, and will be held Saturday morning, starting at 10 o'clock.

The first day of the race meet held in conjunction with the horse show was held on the grounds of the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club. A drenching rain fell during the entire running of the five-race card, and the track was virtually a sea of mud.

Good mutuel prices prevailed during the day.

In the first race, Irish Bud, with Munoz up, went to the post a 20-to-1 shot and paid his backers $34.80 to win. Jilted broke on top in second race and was never headed, winning easily, with Sammy Palumbo up. The horse rewarded its backers with $13.40 for each $2 mutuel slip. The feature of the day, the Horse Show purse, a 6½-furlong race, was captured by Frances Cooper, with Jockey Prain in the saddle. Jockey Brooks booted Do Tell to win in the fifth race, nosing out Rosell in a fast finish.

The Horse Show judges included George Wallihan, Front Royal, Va.; Maj. Wall, Front Royal, Va.; Gus Riggs, Baltimore, Md.; Roy Grove, Martinsburg, W. Va.; C. W. Cunnigham, Hagerstown, Md., and Janon Fisher, Pikesville, Md.

Officers of the local horse show association are Dr. H. B. Langdon, president; C. M. B. Brown, secretary and treasurer, and Frank J. Brooke, manager.

Horse Show Results.

Foal of 1934, heavy draft—First, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Llangolen Farms, Upperville, Va.; second and third prizes also to Mrs. Whitney's entries.

Jenkins Seeks Auto Records

Claims 200-Mile Mark; to Go on For 36 Hours.

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah, Aug. 16 (AP).—Roaring around a 10-mile track on the salt beds 100 miles west of Salt Lake City, Ab Jenkins today drove his 12-cylinder automobile in pursuit of new world's records for various distances.

He covered the first 100 miles in 45 minutes 29 seconds, for an average of 131.39 miles per hour, and his average for 200 miles was 132.18 miles per hour, claimed as a new record. He planned to continue the grind without a let-up for 36 hours, covering upward of 3,000 miles.

Jenkins set a new record of 122.06 miles per hour for 200 miles in his trials over the Salt Flats last summer, but an English racer boosted it to 128 miles on a banked speedway later.

The course is as level as a billiard table, over the pure salt deposit that once was a prehistoric lake bed.

He drove for 24 hours last summer for an average of 122.06 miles per hour.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Red Rule.

In Zenda there is sorrow, and life's become a curse, today is bad, tomorrow is likely to be worse. For now a stern dictator is bossing everything; it seems his power is greater than that of any king. He's always scenting treason, he dreams of that, and then, without sufficient reason he butchers useful men. The old, the young, the mighty, are backed against a wall, in uniform or nightie, and slain with leaden ball. And there are men with cleavers, fierce, brutal delegates, who end life's fitful fevers for those the tyrant hates. The tyrant's spies are sneaking around the public squares, to locate people speaking their true thoughts unawares. These speakers, rash and heedless, are trotted to the pen, and it is surely needless to say what happens then. Without a pastor near them, without a crowner's quest, the tyrant's butchers steer them to their eternal rest. There is a reign of terror, with gunmen in cahoots; no voter or wayfarer but trembles in his boots. And Zenda once was peaceful, industrious and sane, and man had his valise full of fancy coins and plain. The factories were running, and workers drew their wage, and no one went a-gunning in foolish, frantic rage. With men of art and science the country once was blest, they were the chief reliance of Zenda at her best. But now the only labor is grinding snickersnees, that man may slay his neighbor and on his chattels seize.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Waiting — By Harry J. Tuthill

I WISH I KNEW WHEN MY COUSIN IKE WOULD GET HERE TO CLAIM THAT WIRE WE ACCIDENTALLY OPENED. I WONDER WHAT HE'LL DO WITH ALL THAT MONEY HE CAN GET FOR HIS LAND?
I WISH SOMETHING LIKE THAT, STRIKING OIL, WOULD HAPPEN TO US. $500,000! MY STARS!
ASIDE FROM HAVING SUCH A FEROCIOUS APPETITE, IKE IS JUST AS GOOD AS ANY OF OUR RELATIVES. ANY TIME HE HAD A DOLLAR, AND WASN'T HUNGRY, HE'D LEND YOU HALF OF IT.
$500,000! IMAGINE THAT MUCH BEING JUST THROWN INTO THE LAP OF A WOMAN WHO DOESN'T KNOW THE VALUE OF EVEN $5.
IKE WILL SIMPLY HAVE TO GET SOMEONE TO MANAGE HIS MONEY, BUT I WOULDN'T EVEN CONSIDER A PROPOSITION LIKE THAT UNTIL AFTER I'VE TALKED THINGS OVER WITH HIM.

D. C. Drenched As Midwest Drought Ends

10 a. m.	76	4 p. m.	74
11 a. m.	77	5 p. m.	74
Noon	75	6 p. m.	74
1 p. m.	74	7 p. m.	74
2 p. m.	74	8 p. m.	73
3 p. m.	74	9 p. m.	73

Washington shared the Nation's general rainfall yesterday, with temperatures here in the mid-70's, and a steady downpour drenching the city throughout the day.

Today will see further showers, and not much change in temperature, the Weather Bureau predicted.

Cruising the slippery streets in their scout cars, police yesterday cleared away the debris deposited by Wednesday's violent electrical storm. Here and there limbs remained on sidewalks or in lawns, but most of the havoc wrought by the 58-mile-per-hour gale had vanished.

Out in the drought belt of the Middle West the rain was music to farmers.

In several localities of Missouri and Illinois, the Associated Press reported, the precipitation reached almost cloudburst proportions. Elsewhere it pattered on seared fields in time to save some of the corn crop, push later crops along and revive pastures.

5.42 Inches Reported.

At Mexico, Mo., a downpour of 5.42 inches was reported, the heaviest since 1928. Union City, Mo., had 4.20 inches. Ten out of 25 Missouri stations had more than an inch.

Striking Tuscola, Ill., a violent storm filled dry stream beds, stalled highway traffic and soaked fields in 5.63 inches of rain. St. Louis had the heaviest rain in 13 months.

Assurance of an average crop of corn following intermittent showers of the last four days was given farmers in northern and eastern Iowa.

The heavy precipitation was general in northern Kansas and Michigan and southern Minnesota. In other points of the arid area, the Associated Press said, the showers had come too late to salvage major crops, but the threatening water shortage was alleviated.

In Washington during the last two days the rainfall has been 1.56 inches, the Weather Bureau here said. Rain continued to fall in steady sheets late yesterday afternoon.

Heavy Rains Flood West Virginia Area

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 16 (Spl.). Flood conditions from swollen rivers and tributaries obtained this evening in various points of central West Virginia as the result of an almost steady downpour of rain since yesterday afternoon.

Three and two-tenths inches of rain fell in the Clarksburg area, the greatest for a like period since 1919. Bridgeport residents were forced to move household effects and live stock to higher grounds, and a bridge at Maple Lake collapsed.

Hartzell's Guilt Upheld by Court

Faces Prison and Fine in Drake Estate Fraud.

St. Louis, Aug. 16 (AP).—The conviction of Oscar M. Hartzell for mail fraud in promotion of the mythical $22,000,000 "Sir Francis Drake estate" was upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in an opinion filed here today.

Hartzell, who sold interests in the supposed estate to farmers throughout the Middle West, was sentenced to ten years in prison and fined $10,000 when convicted last November in Federal court at Sioux City, Iowa.

In ten years the promoter collected between $700,000 and $800,000 on his scheme through agents in various parts of the country, the appellate court said in its decision.

Nazis Setting Stage For Hitler Vote Appeal

Berlin, Aug. 16 (AP).—The waves of political oratory which have been billowing over Germany without backwash were halted abruptly tonight to provide a dramatic pause in advance of Adolf Hitler's personal plea for support of his policies in the plebiscite Sunday.

The chancellor, who wants the German people to shout an enthusiastic and unanimous "ja" to his assumption of presidential powers, will speak on the radio between 8 and 10 p. m. tomorrow.

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us sluggish, grouchy and no good for anything.

What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ¾ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (that we don't) and we feel like a whipped hound, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—25¢. ©1934, C.M.Co. —Advt.

The Federal Diary

REROUTING of the transit lines will not be accomplished without a voice from the Federal employes, representatives of the National Federation of Federal Employes unions in Washington emphatically declared last night.

BAKER

"This is a matter that affects us more than any of the other local residents," they point out.

The public utilities committee of the District Federation of the N. F. F. E. already has started a comprehensive study of the several rerouting plans and will make recommendations for the benefit of all Government workers, it was reported at the federation meeting last night.

The Beeler report was discussed in detail and the federation expressed gratification that W. H. Ahearn, aid in the traffic problems, had declared that the Federal employes were necessarily one of the biggest factors in the study of the transit shifts.

The Washington unions of N.F.F.E. have been striving for months for better transportation facilities. Several instances of these groups having given constructive criticism which resulted in improvement of service are on record. The traffic congestion has reached unprecedented heights this year.

Missing Boy Scout Discovered Dead

Youth Apparently Had Fallen From Cliff Into Lake.

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (AP).—Clad in his Boy Scout uniform except for shoes, the body of 14-year-old Vincent Slocomb, missing since Monday when he disappeared in the rough White Oak Canyon area, was found floating behind Big Tujunga Dam, 20 miles north of here, today.

Young Slocomb was one of a party of four Boy Scouts who went on a fishing and exploring trip Monday that turned into one of terror and tragedy. Two, Edward Ketten and Fred Lippert, jr., plunged over a steep incline near the scene of the Slocomb boy's fall. They lay in hospitals today in a grave condition.

St. Louis Hotel Assn. Quits Code as Group

St. Louis, Aug. 16 (AP).—The St. Louis Hotel Association, comprising about 40 hotels, has voted to abandon NRA requirements as an organization, leaving individual members free to act as they see fit.

Officers of the association today said the decision was made because of competition from some hotels which failed to heed code regulations as to wages and hours of work for employes. They charged the hotel code had not been enforced.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co. —Advt.
